address	Chestnut St & Federal St, Salem, MA 01970
category	landmark
subcategories	["architecture", "federal_style", "national_register"] short_narration	The McIntire Historic District is named for architect Samuel McIntire, who designed many of the grand mansions in this neighborhood. It is one of the finest collections of Federal-era architecture in the United States.

long_narration	The McIntire Historic District encompasses several blocks of Salem's most architecturally significant streets, including Chestnut, Federal, and Essex Streets. Named for Samuel McIntire, a self-taught woodcarver and architect who became one of the most important builders of the Federal period, the district contains dozens of grand mansions built between roughly 1780 and 1830, when Salem was one of the wealthiest cities in America. McIntire's signature style combined elegant Federal proportions with exquisite carved ornament. His Hamilton Hall, built in 1805 as a social hall for Salem's elite, is a masterpiece of the style. The district is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and is considered one of the finest intact collections of Federal architecture in the country.

lng	-70.8896
address	14 Mall St, Salem, MA 01970
category	literary

subcategories	["hawthorne", "historic_house", "writing"]
short_narration	At 14 Mall Street, Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote The Scarlet Letter in the autumn and winter of 1849. He had just been fired from his position at the Custom House, and the loss drove him to produce his masterpiece.
long_narration	It was at this modest house on Mall Street that Nathaniel Hawthorne wrote The Scarlet Letter, the novel that would make him one of the most important American authors. In June 1849, Hawthorne was abruptly removed from his position as surveyor at the Custom House, a political casualty of the change in presidential administration. Financially desperate and deeply bitter, he channeled his anger and his intimate knowledge of Salem's Puritan history into a sustained burst of creative energy. Working through the autumn and winter of 1849, he produced the novel in a matter of months. His wife Sophia later recalled that he would read chapters aloud to her, and that the final scene left him with a headache so intense he went to bed. The Scarlet Letter was published in March 1850 and was an immediate sensation.

Castle Dismal (Manning House) [tour] id: castle_dismal

address	10½ Herbert St (now 21 Union St), Salem, MA 01970
category	literary
subcategories	["hawthorne", "historic_house", "childhood"]
short_narration	This was the Manning family home where young Nathaniel Hawthorne spent much of his boyhood. He called it Castle Dismal, reflecting the gloomy, reclusive years he spent reading and dreaming in its upper rooms.
long_narration	After the death of Nathaniel Hawthorne's father, a sea captain who died of yellow fever in Suriname when Nathaniel was just four years old, the family moved in with the Manning relatives at this house on Herbert Street. Young Hawthorne lived here through much of his childhood and into his twenties, spending long solitary years reading voraciously and beginning to write. He nicknamed the house Castle Dismal, a name that captures the brooding, isolated quality of those formative years. It was in this house that Hawthorne developed the introspective, shadow-haunted sensibility that would define his literary voice. The building has been altered over the centuries but still stands, a quiet landmark in Hawthorne's personal geography of Salem.

subcategories	["nps", "lighthouse", "waterfront"] short_narration	The Derby Wharf Light Station stands at the far end of the half-mile wharf. This small square lighthouse has guided vessels into Salem Harbor since 1871.
long_narration	The Derby Wharf Light Station sits at the outermost point of Derby Wharf, marking the entrance to Salem Harbor. The current structure, a small square brick tower, was built in 1871 to replace an earlier wooden lighthouse. It guided merchant ships, fishing boats, and later pleasure craft safely into port. The light was automated in 1977 and is now maintained by the Coast Guard as an active aid to navigation. Walking the full length of the wharf to reach this lighthouse offers panoramic views of Salem Harbor, Marblehead Neck, and the open Atlantic. On a clear day you can see all the way to Baker's Island. The walk out and back is one of Salem's most peaceful experiences.

lng	-70.8855
address	71 Essex St, Salem, MA 01970
category	maritime subcategories	["nps", "historic_house", "colonial"] short_narration	The Narbonne House dates to around 1675, making it one of the oldest houses in Salem. It sits within the Salem Maritime National Historical Park and illustrates how ordinary families lived in colonial Salem.
long_narration	The Narbonne House, built around 1675, is one of the oldest surviving houses in Salem and a rare example of a modest colonial dwelling. Unlike the grand merchant homes that dominate Salem's historic landscape, this house tells the story of working-class life in colonial New England. Multiple generations of families lived here over more than three centuries, each leaving architectural layers that archaeologists and historians have carefully documented. The house sits within the Salem Maritime National Historical Park and provides a fascinating contrast to the nearby Custom House and grand wharf buildings. Its survival is remarkable. While wealthy merchants built and rebuilt in fashionable styles, this humble First Period house endured virtually unchanged.

short_narration	Salem Maritime National Historical Park is the first National Historic Site in the United States, established in 1938. It preserves Salem's rich maritime heritage from the era when Salem was one of the wealthiest ports in America.
long_narration	Salem Maritime National Historical Park was the first National Historic Site established in the United States, designated by Congress in 1938. The park preserves and interprets the maritime history of New England and the United States. During the late eighteenth century, Salem was one of the richest cities in America, its wealth built on international trade. Ships from Salem sailed to the East Indies, China, Africa, and beyond. The park includes twelve historic structures, a replica tall ship, and approximately ten acres of land along the waterfront. Key sites within the park include the Custom House, where Nathaniel Hawthorne worked as surveyor, Derby Wharf, the Scale House, and the West India Goods Store. Rangers offer free tours and programs throughout the season.

short_narration	The House of the Seven Gables is the setting for Nathaniel Hawthorne's famous 1851 novel. Built in 1668, it is the oldest surviving timber-frame mansion in New England.

long_narration	The House of the Seven Gables, built in 1668, is the oldest surviving timber-frame mansion in New England and the inspiration for Nathaniel Hawthorne's 1851 Gothic novel of the same name. Hawthorne's cousin Susanna Ingersoll lived here and her stories of the house's history inspired his masterwork. The campus includes several historic houses, including Hawthorne's own birthplace, which was moved here from its original Union Street location. Guided tours take visitors through the mansion, including its famous secret staircase, period rooms, and the stunning seaside gardens. The settlement also operates educational programs focused on immigrant history, as the neighborhood was home to waves of new Americans in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

short_narration	Bridget Bishop lived near this spot and ran a tavern that drew complaints for serving cider late and permitting games of shovelboard. She wore a red bodice, had been married three times, and had been accused of witchcraft once before in sixteen eighty. She was the perfect first target.
long_narration	Bridget Bishop was the first person executed in the Salem witch trials, hanged at Proctor's Ledge on June 10, 1692. She was approximately sixty years old. She had been married three times, ran an unlicensed tavern near this location, and wore clothing that scandalized Puritan sensibilities, particularly a red bodice that was entered into evidence at her trial. She had been tried for witchcraft once before, in 1680, and acquitted. When examined before the magistrates, she said simply: I am no witch. I know not what a witch is. She was chosen first because she had no powerful family to object, no faction to protect her, and a reputation that the community had already convicted years before the court convened.

long_narration	Charter Street Cemetery, also known as the Old Burying Point, is the oldest burying ground in Salem and one of the oldest in the entire United States, established in 1637. The cemetery contains the graves of several figures connected to the witch trials, including Judge John Hathorne, the most zealous of the Salem witch trial magistrates and a direct ancestor of author Nathaniel Hawthorne. Governor Simon Bradstreet, who helped end the trials, is also interred here. Other notable burials include Captain Richard More, a Mayflower passenger. The cemetery's weathered slate headstones, many featuring carved skulls and winged death's heads, are striking examples of early colonial funerary art. The adjacent Witch Trials Memorial makes this a natural pairing for visitors interested in the 1692 events.

short_narration	Near this location on Washington Street stood the home of Judge John Hathorne, the most relentless interrogator during the 1692 witch trials. His leading questions and presumption of guilt helped seal the fate of many accused.
long_narration	Judge John Hathorne lived near this spot on Washington Street. He was the chief examiner during the Salem witch trials, presiding over the preliminary hearings that determined whether the accused would face trial. Hathorne was notorious for his aggressive interrogation style. He assumed guilt before asking a single question, demanding that the accused explain why they were afflicting their accusers rather than allowing them to defend themselves. His most famous exchange was with Rebecca Nurse, the elderly grandmother whom he badgered relentlessly despite her protests of innocence. Unlike fellow magistrate Samuel Sewall, Hathorne never expressed regret for his role. He continued to serve in public office until his death in 1717. His great-great-grandson, the author Nathaniel Hawthorne, added a W to the family name, widely believed to be an attempt to distance himself from this ancestor's dark legacy.

short_narration	Philip English's mansion stood near this corner. Born Philippe d'Anglois on the Isle of Jersey, he built a fortune of twenty-one ships, fourteen buildings, and a warehouse empire. In 1692, both he and his wife Mary were accused of witchcraft.

long_narration	Philip English was born Philippe d'Anglois on the Isle of Jersey in 1651. He arrived in Salem in the 1670s and built the largest commercial fortune in Essex County: twenty-one vessels, fourteen buildings, a warehouse on the wharf, and this mansion on Essex Street. When the accusations reached Salem's elite in 1692, both Philip and Mary were named. They escaped imprisonment and fled to New York. They returned after the trials, but Mary died in 1694 from the effects of imprisonment. English spent forty-two years pursuing restitution. When Sheriff Corwin died in 1696, English reportedly attempted to seize the sheriff's body for debt. English Street preserves his name.

short_narration	This is Proctor's Ledge, confirmed in 2016 as the site where nineteen people were hanged for witchcraft in 1692. A memorial was dedicated here in July 2017.
long_narration	Proctor's Ledge is the confirmed execution site of the Salem witch trials. For centuries, the exact location of the hangings was debated, with Gallows Hill often cited. In January 2016, a research team led by historian Emerson Baker used historical documents, topographic analysis, and witness testimonies to conclusively identify this small rocky outcropping as the true execution site. The first victim, Bridget Bishop, was hanged here on June 10, 1692. Over the next four months, eighteen more people followed her to the gallows. The memorial, dedicated on July 19, 2017, the three hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary of the hangings of five victims on that date in 1692, consists of stone walls inscribed with the names and execution dates of all nineteen victims hanged here. Giles Corey, pressed to death at a different location, is also commemorated.

short_narration	The Rebecca Nurse Homestead stands in what was Salem Village, now Danvers. Rebecca Nurse, a pious seventy-one-year-old grandmother, was among the most sympathetic victims of the trials.
long_narration	The Rebecca Nurse Homestead is one of the most important surviving sites of the Salem witch trials. Located in Danvers, the original Salem Village, this was the home of Rebecca Nurse, a seventy-one-year-old grandmother whose arrest and execution shocked many colonists and helped turn public opinion against the trials. Despite a jury initially finding her not guilty, the judges sent the jury back. She was convicted and hanged on July 19, 1692. The homestead includes the original 1678 house, a reproduction of the 1672 Salem Village meetinghouse, and a family cemetery where Rebecca's remains are believed to be interred. The site offers one of the most authentic connections to life in seventeenth-century Salem Village.

short_narration	Reverend Nicholas Noyes lived near this spot. He attended examinations, pressured prisoners to confess, and stood at the gallows exhorting the condemned. Sarah Good cursed him from the rope: I am no more a witch than you are a wizard, and if you take away my life, God will give you blood to drink.
long_narration	Reverend Nicholas Noyes was born in 1647, educated at Harvard, and served as the assistant minister of Salem's First Church. He brought unwavering theological certainty to the witch trials. Noyes attended examinations, visited prisoners in jail demanding confessions, and stood at the foot of the gallows pressing the condemned to repent. His most notorious moment came on July 19, 1692, when he exhorted Sarah Good to confess before her hanging. Good, defiant to the end, turned to him and spoke the words that would haunt his remaining years: I am no more a witch than you are a wizard, and if you take away my life, God will give you blood to drink. When he died in 1717, reportedly choking on his own blood from a hemorrhage, the community whispered that Good's prophecy had been fulfilled. Unlike his colleague Samuel Sewall, who publicly repented in 1697, Noyes never expressed doubt or remorse.

short_narration	The Salem Witch Museum occupies a former church at the edge of Salem Common. Inside, thirteen stage sets with life-size figures tell the story of the 1692 witch trials through light and narration.

long_narration	The Salem Witch Museum is one of the most visited attractions in Salem. Housed in a former mid-nineteenth century church, it uses thirteen stage sets with life-size figures to dramatize the events of the 1692 witch hysteria. The main presentation takes visitors through the accusations, the trials, and the executions, with particular focus on key figures like Tituba, Bridget Bishop, and Rebecca Nurse. A second exhibition called Witches: Evolving Perceptions traces the concept of the witch from biblical times through modern Wicca. The building itself, a Gothic Revival structure originally built in 1846, adds to the atmosphere. The museum has been operating since 1972 and has become one of Salem's most iconic landmarks, visible from across Salem Common with its distinctive pointed turrets.

short_narration	You are approaching the Salem Witch Trials Memorial. Dedicated in 1992 on the three hundredth anniversary of the trials. Twenty stone benches, each inscribed with the name of a victim, line this quiet park.
long_narration	The Salem Witch Trials Memorial stands as a solemn tribute to the twenty innocent people executed during the witch hysteria of 1692. Designed by architect James Cutler and artist Maggie Smith, it was dedicated on the tercentenary of the trials in August 1992. Nobel Laureate Elie Wiesel delivered the dedication speech. Twenty granite benches jut from the stone walls, each bearing the name, method, and date of execution of a victim. The entrance features the victims' protests of innocence, their words literally cut off mid-sentence by the stone walls. Locust trees cast dappled shadows over the space, chosen for their historical association with the gallows. This memorial serves as a permanent reminder of what happens when fear, intolerance, and injustice go unchecked.

short_narration	Near this spot on Washington Street lived High Sheriff George Corwin, the man who carried out the arrests and executions during the Salem witch trials. He personally seized the property of the accused.
long_narration	High Sheriff George Corwin lived near this location on Washington Street. As the officer responsible for executing the warrants and sentences of the Court of Oyer and Terminer, Corwin played a central role in the physical enforcement of the witch trials. He arrested the accused, transported them to jail, and oversaw their executions at Proctor's Ledge. Corwin was also responsible for the pressing death of Giles Corey, who refused to enter a plea and was subjected to heavy stones placed on his chest over two days until he died. Corwin also seized the property and livestock of the condemned, enriching himself in the process. After the trials ended, he was so reviled that when he died in 1696 at age thirty, the family of one of his victims attached his body for debt. His remains were reportedly hidden in the basement of this house to protect them from further retribution.

short_narration	This is the Witch House, the only structure still standing with direct ties to the Salem witch trials of 1692. Judge Jonathan Corwin lived here and conducted preliminary examinations of accused witches.
long_narration	The Witch House is the only remaining building in Salem with direct connections to the witchcraft trials of 1692. Built around 1675, it was the home of Judge Jonathan Corwin, one of the magistrates who conducted preliminary examinations of accused witches. Several of these examinations likely took place in this very house. Corwin served on the Court of Oyer and Terminer that tried and convicted the accused. The house has been restored to its seventeenth-century appearance and serves as a museum of life in the late sixteen hundreds. Period furnishings, apothecary items, and architectural details give visitors a window into Puritan daily life. The building was nearly demolished in the 1940s but was saved and moved slightly from its original location to accommodate road widening.

description	Salem's Old Town Hall is a Federal style building, erected in 1816 and namesake of the Old Town Hall National Historic District. This space is no longer used as a space for municipal operations but is instead utilized as a cultural and rental facility in service to the community of Salem, MA. Old Town Hall is a beautiful federal style building built in 1816, located in the historic heart of downtown Salem. The two-story brick building features Palladian windows, carved wood details, antique chandeliers, decorative columns, hardwood floors. A do-it-yourself venue that gives you the palette to create your special day. Old Town Hall has an elevator and is handicapped accessible. The building is not air conditioned. The first floor space the “Colonnade” presents wooden floors, large windows, and two rows of white pillars with lots of old world charm. The Main floor can accommodate cocktail parties and receptions for up to 100 people. The second story of Old Town Hall, the “Great Hall” is a breathtaking room with large Palladian arached windows. The Great Hall is the perfect location for ceremonies, dinners, receptions and special events hosting up to 100 people.

description	Located in the Point Neighborhood, Punto Urban Art Museum is a beautiful open-air museum that features 75 large-scale murals by 30 world-renowned artists and 25 local artists, all within a three-block radius. Only a five-minute walk from downtown and free to explore, this museum believes that public art can strengthen communities and help break down invisible socio-economic barriers. Special Exhibitions Punto Urban Art Museum also offers an assortment of special exhibitions that you should check out. A Dream Called Home - Inspired by award-winning, Mexican-American author Reyna Grande's memoir, artists have painted murals in Salem to share their stories that reflect and/or connect with the life/home that communities of color continue to pursue in this country. Muñecas Sin Rostro - The Faceless Dolls Project is a creative and educational arts initiative inspired by the traditional Faceless Dolls made by Liliana Mera Lime. You're invited to create a unique, faceless doll to share an untold story about you or your family, honor women of the past and present, and celebrate BIPOC stories and culture. The American Dream - Inspired by the ethos of the United States of America, this exhibit aims to provoke deeper conversations about the constant quest for a better life. As the meaning and attainability of this dream has been called into question in recent years, New England-based artists have been called on to use their creativity to develop murals based on their interpretation of "The American Dream." The Casa De Abuela Project The latest art project set up by Punto Urban Art Museum, Casa de Abuela (Grandma's House) is a replica of a typical Dominican country house. Within the four simple walls and sheltered by a tin roof, the main space within Casa de Abuela will reveal a realistic living room scene like a humble Dominican grandmother would reside in. Casa de Abuela is meant to offer innovative opportunities to help engage the community, activate a community parcel, and create economic development. Connected to the house will be an area reserved for pop-up cultural experiences, like a convenience store similar to what you would find in the Dominican Republic, and other elements will be added to the program over time. As a whole, Casa de Abuela acts as a physical space for visitors and residents to celebrate their culture, remember their roots through storytelling, and have opportunities to share various cultural foods.

description	Located at 2 New Liberty Street across from the Peabody Essex Museum and the Museum Place Garage, a central location to all the museums, restaurants, and attractions, and information available, the Visitor Center is the perfect place to begin your tour of Salem. Portable toilets are currently available next to the Visitor Center, and indoor restrooms are accessible during operating hours. History and Culture The Salem Visitor Center, originally known as the Salem Armory, was the headquarters and training facility for the Second Corps of Cadets, tracing back roots to the 18th century. When fire destroyed the building in 1982, the remaining drill shed was converted into the Salem Armory Visitor Center in 1994. At the center, National Park staff and volunteers share information on Essex County and the area's special historic sites.

description	In the 1980's, the Salem Heritage Trail was born to provide visitors a self-guided walking tour of Salem's historic sites. The trail is meant to bridge connections between the earliest settlers in Salem, local Indigenous Peoples, Colonial Salem and the Witch Trials, Industrial Heritage, Abolitionism and African American stories, Immigrant Experiences, and more. You'll find a mix of historical sites and commercial and tourist attractions when walking the trail. In 2020, Salem revised the Salem Heritage Trail, removing its references to its original offensive "Red Line" history to promote more inclusivity within the downtown area and beyond. description	For those who can’t wait for spooky season, “Wicked New England” is bringing its Halfway to Halloween Festival back to “The Witch City”, Salem, Massachusetts. The event will once again pack both floors of Old Town Hall, and will be creeping out into Derby Square for the first time. The hall will be filled with a curated vendor market featuring spooky vendors from every New England state and beyond, stage presentations by New England Halloween businesses and experiences, photo ops with iconic characters, monsters lurking and more. This second-year event will occur on Sunday, April 19, 2026, from 12:00pm-7:00pm. The Marketplace features vendors from every New England state and beyond with their spooky, scary, macabre and Halloween-themed merchandise for all to enjoy. From apparel to candles, jewelry, decorations, artwork, pet accessories, bath goods, apothecary items and more, every Halloween-loving guest is sure to find something to take home. Heirloom Hallowe’en will be debuting their traveling museum showcasing the rich history of Halloween traditions and decorations. They will be decorating Old Town Hall’s stage with artifacts from their diverse collection, featuring antique jack-o’-lanterns, paper decorations, party games, postcards, and other historic treasures from Halloweens past. They will share the history of select artifacts as part of a Stage Presentation. Additional Stage Presentations include discussions with Halloween New England as they share family-friendly Halloween offerings in New England, a “do it yourself” demonstration from beloved haunted house attraction Barrett’s Haunted Mansion, an offering from Witch City Broom Co., tales of real-life ghostly encounters from Wicked Ghost Hunters, a mass wedding vow renewal with BORAH! from Salem’s Black Hat Society where anyone in attendance can take part, a peek behind the scenes with “Hocus Pocus Live: An All New Parody Musical” presented by Summer Orlando Productions, and more! Salem’s own BORAH! The Witch, as seen on “America’s Got Talent”, and the cast of “Hocus Pocus Live: An All New Parody Musical” will be in attendance for the entirety of the event to meet with fans at their photo ops. The latter are especially fitting as Old Town Hall was used for exterior shooting in the Disney movie “Hocus Pocus”. New this year is the opportunity for children in attendance to trick-or-treat from participating vendors. This is a free offering for any child enjoying the event. They’ll be able to pick up a trick-or-treat bag at the event entrance. Children four and under attend free with a paid adult. Tickets are now on sale for this one-day event. General Admission is only $11 and can be purchased on our site. This event is sponsored by Witch City Walking Tours and Witch City Broom Co.

description	Far From The Tree Cider is a craft cider house specializing in unique, high-quality hard cider made from local apples and all-natural ingredients. Most apples don’t fall far from the tree, and our ciders are no exception. Far From The Tree respects tradition by controlling the entire production process from apple pressing straight through to canning. Check out our selection of flagships, seasonals, and other unique offerings both on draft and to-go. Enjoy yourself in our taproom or on our dog friendly patio. Rooted in tradition, unique to the core.

description	Discover the Beauty & History of Tea at Jolie! Visit our Tea Salon & Patisserie on Derby Street in Salem. Enjoy our beautiful setting for High Tea or Pastry in this historical port City, where tea was one of many imports to traverse the oceans as cargo aboard the massive Clipper Ships. We have a Loose Leaf Tea Bar with over 300 teas that can be purchased by the ounce. Let our Tea Counter guides help you find the perfect flavor profile of tea for your enjoyment in our cafe or to take with you. Reservations for High Tea may be made online, however, Walk-Ins are always welcome! Check out our additional location in Beverly, at 192 Cabot Street.

description	Now a landmark of the city of Salem, this six-foot-tall statue of Elizabeth Montgomery pays tribute to the well-known 1960s TV sitcom ‘Bewitched.’ The series filmed several episodes in Salem for its seventh season in 1970 after a fire shut down its Hollywood set. In 2005, the nostalgia cable channel TV Land gifted this bronze beauty to Salem in honor of the show’s 40th anniversary, and it has quickly become a staple in our magical city. Take selfies with it casting spells, twitching your nose, and having a good time in Salem. Photo: Ben Rekemeyer description	Salem's newest green space honors the legacy of Charlotte Forten, an abolitionist, women's right's activist, and Salem State University's first African-American graduate. The roughly 25,000 square foot Charlotte Forten Park includes a plaza for programs and performances, a harbor-walk around the South River, swing seating facing the water, built-in percussion features, and green space. The park can connect to Downtown Salem, the Point neighborhood and Salem's historic waterfront while paying tribute to Forten's legacy and celebrating all that she achieved for generations to come. Charlotte Forten was an educator, writer, poet, abolitionist, and women's rights activist. Forten was originally from Philadelphia where she was brought up in a prominent abolitionist family and her desire for an equal education led her to Salem, Massachusetts, where she was the first African-American to graduate from the Salem Normal School, now Salem State University, with the class of 1856. Throughout her life, Forten faced inequality due to her race and gender; however, that did not deter her. She used her pen to express her frustrations and advocate for solutions. Her life's work as a poet and translator showcased her as a leading social justice activist. Forten, who was an advocate for equality for women and people of color, education for all, and for the end of slavery, was also the first northern African-American teacher to go south to teach former slaves.

description	The Derby Wharf Light Station was constructed in 1871 to better assist ships entering Salem Harbor. The lighthouse features a unique square design, and is only about 20 feet tall. The National Park Service gained ownership of the lighthouse in 1977, and today NPS rangers at the Salem Maritime National Historic Site are available to provide additional information about the light station. The interior of the lighthouse is not open to the public, however the exterior is accessible via a scenic walk to the end of Derby Wharf.

description	Lady of Salem” Maritime Public Art Exhibition is on display June-October, celebrating the “Golden Age of Sail “ in New Englands original port of culture, Salem Massachusetts. The Salem Beautification Committee sponsored project began in 2012. Lady of Salem features over 17 figureheads created by local artists. The “Ladies” can be found adorning lampposts along the Essex St. pedestrian mall. The Lady of Salem” exhibition is a public-private collaboration which pairs local artists with school, civic organization or business sponsors. Artists paint and embellish a 33 inch fiber molded form. Each figurehead embodies various aspects of Salem’s Golden Age of Sail. Figureheads are ornamental carvings which graced the bowsprit of sailing ships and helped to identify the vessel. During the late 1790’s Salem was the richest city in America with over 50 wharves. Spices, textiles and other riches were brought to Salem from Asia and the Caribbean. Locally crafted products and commodities were traded around the world. Salem’s City motto, “To the farthest ports of the rich East” celebrates this illustrious period in our history! The “Ladies” pay homage to our maritime glory.

description	One of the sites of the major international ports in the colonies, the Salem Harbor spans both north and south of Salem. During the late 18th and early 19th centuries, international trade was conducted in Salem from the Atlantic coast, importing ceramics, furniture, decorative arts, artificial flowers, spices, and dyes. The harbor is known for its beautiful sunsets and views, which can be best seen on Pickering Wharf.

description	The Hawthorne Hotel has been a landmark in Salem since opening its doors in 1925. This beautifully restored Federal-style historic hotel is named for celebrated author Nathaniel Hawthorne, who grew up in Salem, served as Surveyor of the Port at the Salem Custom House, and wrote The Scarlet Letter while living nearby. Ideally located in the heart of downtown Salem, the hotel overlooks historic Salem Common and is directly across from the Salem Witch Museum. Guests are just steps from the Peabody Essex Museum, The House of the Seven Gables, Pickering Wharf, and Front Street's shops and restaurants—making the Hawthorne Hotel an ideal home base for exploring Salem and the North Shore of Massachusetts. The hotel's 89 guest rooms blend historic character with modern comfort. Many rooms feature views of Salem Common or the surrounding historic district, while updated furnishings, refined gold accents, and comfortable amenities provide a welcoming stay. The Hawthorne is a popular choice for wedding guest accommodations, corporate travelers, and weekend getaways in Salem, MA. In 2025, the Hawthorne celebrated its 100th anniversary and was named Best Historic Hotel by Historic Hotels of America. A proud member of Historic Hotels of America and New England Inns & Resorts, the hotel is also a certified Age-Friendly Salem business. Amenities include complimentary on-site parking, full accessibility, and a welcoming atmosphere for all visitors. Meetings & Corporate Events in Downtown Salem Planning a meeting or corporate event in Salem? The Hawthorne Hotel offers over 9,000 square feet of flexible meeting and event space, including the Grand Ballroom and multiple breakout rooms. Ideal for off-site meetings, corporate retreats, trade shows, retirement celebrations, and holiday parties, the hotel combines professional amenities with historic New England character. With 89 guest rooms, a central downtown location, and discounted meeting packages, the Hawthorne provides more than just meeting space—it delivers a full-service corporate event experience. Suggested corporate itineraries and curated amenities make planning easy for businesses hosting events in Salem, MA. Special Events & Weddings in Salem, MA Located in the heart of downtown Salem overlooking the historic Salem Common, the Hawthorne Hotel is a premier Salem MA wedding venue and special event destination. The hotel features timeless event spaces, including the elegant Grand Ballroom with dramatic Palladian windows facing the Common, along with multiple smaller function rooms ideal for rehearsal dinners, bridal showers, engagement parties, and intimate celebrations. The Hawthorne accommodates weddings and celebrations from 10 to 200 guests and offers a variety of inclusive wedding packages designed for a seamless planning experience. Couples work directly with an experienced on-site events team who assist with ceremony coordination, reception details, rehearsal dinners, farewell breakfasts, overnight room blocks, and trusted local vendor referrals. With historic charm, walkable access to Salem's attractions, and comprehensive planning support, the Hawthorne Hotel offers a complete destination wedding experience in Salem, Massachusetts.

description	The Salem Witch Museum, founded in 1972, offers two historical presentations. The first tells the tragic story of the 1692 witch trials and takes place in a large auditorium with life-sized stage sets which are illuminated and dramatically narrated to immerse visitors in the world of 17th-century Salem. The second exhibit, Witches: Evolving Perceptions, examines the European witchcraft trials, the evolving image of the witch, and the larger issues of persecution and scapegoating in American history. Visit salemwitchmuseum.com for information on purchasing tickets, upcoming virtual events, educational materials, and the online museum store.

description	Striking in its simplicity, the Memorial is surrounded on three sides by a handcrafted granite wall. Inscribed in the rough stone threshold entering the Memorial are the victims' protests of innocence. These protests are interrupted mid-sentence by the wall, symbolizing society's indifference to oppression. Six locust trees, the last to flower and the first to lose their leaves, represent the injustice of the Salem witch trials. The Symbolism at The Salem Witch Trials Memorial At the memorial's entrance, the clipped quotations represent the silenced voices of the accused during the Salem witch trials. Their statements of innocence are cut off mid-sentence, symbolizing how their pleas were ignored and dismissed. The unfinished words serve as a powerful reminder of the injustice they faced and the lasting impact of a society that failed to listen. Benches within the Memorial perimeter bear the names and the execution dates of each of the 20 victims, creating a quiet, contemplative environment in which to evoke the spirit and strength of those people who chose to die rather than compromise their personal truths. Visiting The Salem Witch Trials Memorial The Witch Trials Memorial is located on Liberty Street between Charter Street and Derby Street and is open from dawn till dusk. It is handicapped accessible and is appropriate for all ages. When visiting the Salem Witch Trials Memorial it's important to treat it with honor and respect. description	Essex Heritage Essex National Heritage Commission (Essex Heritage) is a non-profit organization that has been federally authorized to manage and oversee the unique heritage resources of the Essex National Heritage Area. Mission: To preserve and enhance the historic, cultural, and natural resources of the Essex National Heritage Area located in Essex County, Massachusetts. Vision: The historic, cultural and natural resources (and their associated history, organizations, and people) are recognized as critically important to maintaining the quality of life, community vitality, and economic sustainability of Essex County, Massachusetts. Essex National Heritage Area The Essex National Heritage Area was created as an act of Congress in 1996 and encompasses the 34 cities and towns of Essex County, Massachusetts. Within this NHA there are two National Parks (Salem Maritime National Historic Site and Saugus Ironworks National Historic Site) and the US Parker River National Wildlife Refuge. There are also several state parks, thousands of acres of conservation land, and numerous museums, historic houses and heritage sites that are open to the public and owned/managed by non-profit organizations and municipal governments. Land Acknowledgement: The Essex National Heritage Area encompasses land on which Native communities have thrived for millennia. The Pawtucket band of the Massachuset Tribe inhabited the land that is now known as Essex County. As advocates for the appropriate interpretation and stewardship of our many natural, historic, and cultural resources, Essex Heritage has a responsibility to acknowledge all stories, past and present.

description	The mission of the Salem Chamber of Commerce is to make Salem a better place to live, work, and do business. The Salem Chamber serves as the voice for member businesses, representing, advocating and working to enhance the business and civic environment. With 525 members, we are the largest business organization in Salem. The Chamber connects its members to people asking for special products or services, and it encourages consumers to frequent member businesses. Chamber membership gives customers the assurance that they are frequenting a reputable business. For visitors to Salem, the Salem Chamber office is located in the heart of the downtown, at 265 Essex Street, and we encourage all to step in and learn about Salem's (business) community.

description	Ledger Restaurant is located in America's second oldest savings bank that showcases the original ceilings, safety deposit boxes and vault doors. The menu is modern New England cuisine with an emphasis on wood fire cooking, local raw bar selections and housemade desserts led by James Beard Nominated Chef, Daniel Gursha. Ledger offers dinner five days a week (Wednesday-Sunday) and brunch on Sunday mornings. Weddings at Ledger Restaurant & Bar There are so many benefits to having your wedding at a restaurant like Ledger. The restaurant provides everything you need in house (chairs, napkins, plates, water decanters etc – no rentals are required! Ledger has an in house sound system and uses Spotify if you can't afford to hire a DJ. Candles, lanterns, and vintage décor add to the unique space. Bringing your own floral arrangements to add your own personal touch. They have amazing craft cocktails that are always available and a huge inventory of bar selections instead of just your basic titos/soda. And of course, they have delicious food! Ledger offers stationary displays, passed appetizers, full sit down meals PLUS they make cakes, donuts & sweet treats all in house too!

description	About Winner of the 2025 Best Seafood Restaurant from North Shore Magazine, and Yelp's 2025 Best Seafood, we look forward to serving you the freshest seafood in New England. The Turner Family has been in the seafood business for four generations; we buy fresh from the local docks, process the fish at our plant in Gloucester and then deliver it to our restaurants. Come experience authentic New England seafood with Turner's Seafood, located in Salem's historic Lyceum Hall. Interested in American History Beyond Salem? Come dine with us at our historic Publick House in Melrose, MA, the Rising Eagle. Open daily for lunch and dinner, including a brunch menu on the weekends.

description	What is it you seek? To find Love or strengthen it? To achieve success? To bring healing, a better job, or justice to one who deserves it? To peer into the future? To contact your beloved dead? Start with the purest oils, richest incense, candles, and soaps, potent charms and gris-gris handmade by true practitioners. Christian Day, Brian Cain, and the Witches of Hex honor the old gods, speak to spirits, handcraft spells, conjure changes, make waves, live every day surrounded by magic. And they welcome you to join them.

description	CPT. Dan Grimes USCG 100-Ton (OUPV) First Aid & CPR Certified Growing up on the water with my dad I've been passionate about boating and fishing since I was 6 years old. I worked alongside him on his commercial fishing boat gaining invaluable knowledge and experience out on the ocean. In 2014 I turned my focus to rod and reel fishing, specializing in catching cod, haddock, stripers, and tuna off the coast of Mass. With decades of experience on the water I'm dedicated to proving unforgettable fishing trips for anglers of all levels. It's not about the catch; it's about the adventure!

long_narration	You're approaching Peabody Essex Museum. Founded in 1799 by Salem sea captains, the Peabody Essex Museum (PEM) shares a global array of art, science, history and culture, including a 200-year old Chinese home. Host your corporate event, banquet, or wedding in an unforgettable artistic setting with the Peabody Essex Museum’s variety of indoor and outdoor spaces.
narration_pass_2	The Peabody Essex Museum traces its origins to 1799, when Salem sea captains formed the East India Marine Society. Members were required to have sailed beyond the Cape of Good Hope or Cape Horn. They brought back objects from every culture they encountered. The museum's collection now exceeds 1.8 million works spanning art, maritime history, Asian culture, and American life. Inside is Yin Yu Tang, a two-hundred-year-old Chinese house transported from Anhui province and rebuilt inside the museum. The building itself, designed by Moshe Safdie, represents Salem's transformation from a port city that collected the world to a cultural institution that preserves it.
narration_pass_3	Salem's maritime reach shaped everything about this city. In the 1790s, Salem ships opened American trade with Sumatra for pepper, making Salem the pepper capital of the world. Captain Jonathan Carnes discovered the source and kept it secret for years. The wealth flowed through families like the Derbys, Crowninshields, and Peabodys. Elias Hasket Derby became America's first millionaire through the Salem trade. When the War of 1812 and the Embargo Acts strangled maritime commerce, Salem's merchants pivoted to manufacturing. The city that once traded with Canton and Calcutta became a mill town. The museum preserves what the sea brought home.

description	Located in the Point Neighborhood, Punto Urban Art Museum is a beautiful open-air museum that features 75 large-scale murals by 30 world-renowned artists and 25 local artists, all within a three-block radius. Only a five-minute walk from downtown and free to explore, this museum believes that public art can strengthen communities and help break down invisible socio-economic barriers. Special Exhibitions Punto Urban Art Museum also offers an assortment of special exhibitions that you should check out. A Dream Called Home - Inspired by award-winning, Mexican-American author Reyna Grande's memoir, artists have painted murals in Salem to share their stories that reflect and/or connect with the life/home that communities of color continue to pursue in this country. Muñecas Sin Rostro - The Faceless Dolls Project is a creative and educational arts initiative inspired by the traditional Faceless Dolls made by Liliana Mera Lime. You're invited to create a unique, faceless doll to share an untold story about you or your family, honor women of the past and present, and celebrate BIPOC stories and culture. The American Dream - Inspired by the ethos of the United States of America, this exhibit aims to provoke deeper conversations about the constant quest for a better life. As the meaning and attainability of this dream has been called into question in recent years, New England-based artists have been called on to use their creativity to develop murals based on their interpretation of "The American Dream." The Casa De Abuela Project The latest art project set up by Punto Urban Art Museum, Casa de Abuela (Grandma's House) is a replica of a typical Dominican country house. Within the four simple walls and sheltered by a tin roof, the main space within Casa de Abuela will reveal a realistic living room scene like a humble Dominican grandmother would reside in. Casa de Abuela is meant to offer innovative opportunities to help engage the community, activate a community parcel, and create economic development. Connected to the house will be an area reserved for pop-up cultural experiences, like a convenience store similar to what you would find in the Dominican Republic, and other elements will be added to the program over time. As a whole, Casa de Abuela acts as a physical space for visitors and residents to celebrate their culture, remember their roots through storytelling, and have opportunities to share various cultural foods.

History and Culture The Salem Visitor Center, originally known as the Salem Armory, was the headquarters and training facility for the Second Corps of Cadets, tracing back roots to the 18th century. When fire destroyed the building in 1982, the remaining drill shed was converted into the Salem Armory Visitor Center in 1994. At the center, National Park staff and volunteers share information on Essex County and the area’s special historic sites.

description	For those who can’t wait for spooky season, “Wicked New England” is bringing its Halfway to Halloween Festival back to “The Witch City”, Salem, Massachusetts. The event will once again pack both floors of Old Town Hall, and will be creeping out into Derby Square for the first time. The hall will be filled with a curated vendor market featuring spooky vendors from every New England state and beyond, stage presentations by New England Halloween businesses and experiences, photo ops with iconic characters, monsters lurking and more. This second-year event will occur on Sunday, April 19, 2026, from 12:00pm-7:00pm. The Marketplace features vendors from every New England state and beyond with their spooky, scary, macabre and Halloween-themed merchandise for all to enjoy. From apparel to candles, jewelry, decorations, artwork, pet accessories, bath goods, apothecary items and more, every Halloween-loving guest is sure to find something to take home. Heirloom Hallowe’en will be debuting their traveling museum showcasing the rich history of Halloween traditions and decorations. They will be decorating Old Town Hall’s stage with artifacts from their diverse collection, featuring antique jack-o’-lanterns, paper decorations, party games, postcards, and other historic treasures from Halloweens past. They will share the history of select artifacts as part of a Stage Presentation. Additional Stage Presentations include discussions with Halloween New England as they share family-friendly Halloween offerings in New England, a “do it yourself” demonstration from beloved haunted house attraction Barrett’s Haunted Mansion, an offering from Witch City Broom Co., tales of real-life ghostly encounters from Wicked Ghost Hunters, a mass wedding vow renewal with BORAH! from Salem’s Black Hat Society where anyone in attendance can take part, a peek behind the scenes with “Hocus Pocus Live: An All New Parody Musical” presented by Summer Orlando Productions, and more! Salem’s own BORAH! The Witch, as seen on “America’s Got Talent”, and the cast of “Hocus Pocus Live: An All New Parody Musical” will be in attendance for the entirety of the event to meet with fans at their photo ops. The latter are especially fitting as Old Town Hall was used for exterior shooting in the Disney movie “Hocus Pocus”. New this year is the opportunity for children in attendance to trick-or-treat from participating vendors. This is a free offering for any child enjoying the event. They’ll be able to pick up a trick-or-treat bag at the event entrance. Children four and under attend free with a paid adult. Tickets are now on sale for this one-day event. General Admission is only $11 and can be purchased on our site. This event is sponsored by Witch City Walking Tours and Witch City Broom Co.

short_narration	Broad Street Cemetery is one of Salem's historic burying grounds long_narration	Broad Street Cemetery is one of Salem's several historic burying grounds, located west of the downtown core near Broad Street. Less visited than the famous Charter Street Cemetery, Broad Street offers a quieter, more contemplative experience among centuries- old headstones. Salem's cemeteries are remarkable for their age and their carved headstones. Colonial-era grave markers feature striking imagery: winged skulls, or death's heads, that represent the Puritan view of mortality. Later stones show cherubs and willows as attitudes toward death softened. The evolution of gravestone carving is visible in Salem's cemeteries, making them open-air museums of colonial art and belief. Broad Street Cemetery provides a less crowded alternative for visitors interested in colonial funerary art and the quiet atmosphere of Salem's older neighborhoods. Please be respectful when visiting. Stay on paths, do not touch or sit on headstones, and remember that these are the final resting places of real people who lived in this community centuries ago.
narration_pass_2	Broad Street Cemetery dates to 1655, making it one of Salem's oldest burying grounds. It holds graves from Salem's colonial and maritime eras. The headstones trace the evolution of Puritan mortality symbols, from stark death's heads to softer cherubs and willows. Many of Salem's ordinary citizens are buried here, the fishermen, farmers, and tradespeople who built the town before the witch trials and rebuilt it after. Unlike Charter Street Cemetery, which holds magistrates and ministers, Broad Street represents the working Salem.
narration_pass_3	The grave markers here span nearly four centuries of New England stonecarving. The earliest are rough fieldstone with crude lettering. By the 1700s, professional carvers like Henry Christian Geyer created elaborate winged skulls and hourglasses. The inscriptions reflect Puritan theology: Remember death. Fugit hora. Here lies the body. The shift from death's heads to cherubs in the mid-1700s marks a theological softening across New England. Each stone was cut by hand, each letter chiseled individually. Some are slate, some sandstone, some marble. The slate has survived best. The sandstone is returning to sand.

short_narration	Charter Street Cemetery is one of the oldest burying grounds in the United States, established in 1637
long_narration	Charter Street Cemetery, also known as the Old Burying Point, is the oldest burying ground in Salem and one of the oldest in the entire United States, established in 1637. The cemetery contains the graves of several figures connected to the witch trials, including Judge John Hathorne, the most zealous of the Salem witch trial magistrates and a direct ancestor of author Nathaniel Hawthorne. Governor Simon Bradstreet, who helped end the trials, is also interred here. Other notable burials include Captain Richard More, a Mayflower passenger. The cemetery's weathered slate headstones, many featuring carved skulls and winged death's heads, are striking examples of early colonial funerary art. The adjacent Witch Trials Memorial makes this a natural pairing for visitors interested in the 1692 events. The Charter Street Cemetery Welcome Center is now open in the seventeenth-century Pickman House next to the memorial. Please treat the cemetery with respect. Stay on established paths. Do not touch or sit on headstones. No rubbings permitted.
narration_pass_2	Founded in 1637, this is Salem's oldest burying ground. Among the headstones lie several figures connected to the witch trials. Judge John Hathorne, the most aggressive examiner of the accused, is buried here. He never expressed regret. His great-great-grandson Nathaniel Hawthorne added a W to the family name, some say to distance himself from the judge's legacy. Justice Samuel Sewall is also associated with this ground. Unlike Hathorne, Sewall publicly apologized in 1697, standing before his congregation while his confession was read aloud. He fasted every year on the anniversary for the rest of his life.
narration_pass_3	The stone carvings themselves tell a story. The oldest markers bear death's heads with wings, reflecting Puritan theology: the soul departing a mortal body. By the early 1700s, the imagery shifts to cherubs and willows, a softening that some scholars connect to the colony's guilt over 1692. The cemetery predates the witch trials by fifty-five years. Salem's founders, its merchants, its ministers, and its accused all share this ground. As Bridget Bishop observed before her execution: Parris preached that devils sit at the Lord's Table. I looked around the meetinghouse and wondered who he meant.

short_narration	Howard Street Cemetery is Salem's most haunted burial ground long_narration	Howard Street Cemetery sits on ground steeped in dark history. It is located near the site where Giles Corey was pressed to death on September 19, 1692. Corey, an eighty-one-year-old farmer, refused to enter a plea of guilty or not guilty at his witch trial. Under English law, a defendant who refused to plead could be subjected to peine forte et dure, strong and hard punishment. Heavy stones were placed on Corey's chest over the course of two days. Each time his tormentors demanded a plea, his only response was: More weight. He died without ever entering a plea, denying the court the power to try him and protecting his family's property from seizure. Howard Street Cemetery is considered one of Salem's most haunted locations. Ghost tour guides report unusual activity here, and visitors have described feelings of unease and cold spots. The cemetery is less manicured than Charter Street, adding to its eerie atmosphere. It is a fitting place to contemplate the courage of Giles Corey and the terrible cost of the 1692 hysteria.
narration_pass_2	This cemetery holds a weight that other Salem graveyards do not. Giles Corey was pressed to death near here on September 19, 1692. He was eighty-one years old. The pressing took two days. Heavy stones were laid on a wooden board over his chest, adding weight each time he refused to enter a plea. He never pleaded. His only recorded words were: More weight. He chose this death deliberately. Under English law, a person who refused to plead could not be tried, and their property could not be forfeited. By enduring the pressing, Corey ensured his farm passed to his heirs, not to the sheriff.
narration_pass_3	Giles Corey was no saint. In 1676, he was accused of beating his farmhand Jacob Goodale to death. He was fined but not convicted. He was cantankerous, argumentative, frequently in court over land disputes. But in 1692, he made a choice that defined his legacy. He had testified against his own wife Martha, driven by fear. He regretted it immediately. When he himself was accused, he calculated his options. As he said: A man's hands tell you who he is. Mine have held a plow since I was twelve. Martha was executed three days after his pressing. She died September 22.

short_narration	Candlelit Ghostly Walking Tours meets at 288 Derby Street
long_narration	The Candlelit Ghostly Walking Tour is one of Salem's oldest and most atmospheric ghost tours, celebrating over thirty years of operation. You meet in the back parking lot of the Salem Wax Museum at 288 Derby Street, light your own lantern, and follow your guide through Salem's darkened streets for forty-five to sixty minutes. The tour visits approximately seven documented haunted historical sites, including the Joshua Ward House, Charter Street Cemetery, and the site of Bridget Bishop's apple orchard. Each stop combines the real history of the location with the ghost stories that have accumulated over centuries. The Joshua Ward House is particularly notable. Built on the site of Sheriff George Corwin's home, it is considered one of the most haunted buildings in Salem. Corwin was the man who carried out the witch trial executions and the pressing death of Giles Corey. Tours run Monday through Thursday at six and seven, and Friday through Sunday starting at five, every half hour, with the last tour at eight. Advance ticket purchase is strongly encouraged. AAA, military, and group discounts available.

short_narration	Specters and Apparitions meets at 32 Derby Square long_narration	Specters and Apparitions offers a ghost hunting tour that goes beyond storytelling. Meeting at 32 Derby Square, participants receive state-of-the-art ghost hunting equipment and visit Salem's most haunted locations to search for paranormal activity. This is hands-on ghost hunting, not passive listening. You will use EMF readers, spirit boxes, and other detection tools while your guide explains the history and reported hauntings at each location. The tour is operated by Witch City Walking Tours, which has consistently been rated among the top cultural and historical tours in the United States on TripAdvisor. Salem provides extraordinary raw material for ghost hunting. A city where twenty people were executed for witchcraft, where centuries-old cemeteries sit in the middle of downtown, and where historical buildings still stand on their original foundations. Whether the equipment picks up anything is part of the adventure. Call or text 781-608-6986 for reservations.

address	20 Hawthorne Blvd, Salem, MA, 01970
type	ghost_tour
short_narration	Vampire Ghost Adventures meets at the Nathaniel Hawthorne Statue on Hawthorne Boulevard long_narration	Vampire Ghost Adventures offers a walking tour unlike any other in Salem. Meeting at the Nathaniel Hawthorne Statue at 20 Hawthorne Boulevard, your guide, who is a vampire, leads you through Salem's haunted streets telling tales of ghosts, witches, vampires, and poltergeists. This is the only walking tour in Salem where you actually enter a building and see haunted objects. The tour deliberately goes to places and tells stories that other tours skip, offering a different perspective on Salem's supernatural history. New England has its own rich vampire folklore, separate from the European tradition. In the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries, communities across Rhode Island, Connecticut, and Vermont exhumed bodies of the recently dead, believing they were feeding on the living. Salem's connection to these darker traditions adds another layer to an already complex supernatural heritage. If you do not see available tickets on the website, call to schedule a tour. The meeting point at the Hawthorne Statue is easy to find, right at the intersection of Hawthorne Boulevard and Essex Street.

long_narration	Witch City Walking Tours has earned a remarkable distinction. Rated the number one cultural and historical tour in the United States by TripAdvisor in both 2023 and 2024, and number two in the world. That is not marketing hyperbole. It is verified traveler reviews from thousands of visitors. Tours depart from 32 Derby Square and cover Salem's witch trial history, haunted locations, and cultural landmarks. The guides are knowledgeable and engaging, with a gift for making history feel immediate and personal. The company also offers the Specters and Apparitions ghost hunting experience for visitors who want a more hands-on paranormal adventure. Derby Square, where tours meet, is a historic space at the heart of downtown Salem. It sits near the old town hall and the pedestrian mall, making it easy to find and convenient for combining with other Salem activities. Call or text 781-608-6986 for reservations. short_narration	Chambers of Terror is at 57 Wharf Street long_narration	Chambers of Terror at 57 Wharf Street claims the title of Salem's scariest haunted attraction, and the reviews tend to back it up. Live actors in elaborate costumes and makeup lurk around every corner, delivering scares that are intense, immediate, and unrelenting. The attraction maintains a strict no-touch policy. The monsters will not physically contact you, but they will invade your personal space in ways that test your nerve. Open daily in September and October, with after-hours Fireside Ghost Stories available for those who want the atmosphere without the jump scares. Salem's haunted attraction scene has grown into one of the most concentrated in New England. During October, the city transforms into a massive Halloween celebration, with haunted houses, ghost tours, costume parades, and street performers competing for visitors' attention. Chambers of Terror stands out by focusing on old-school scares delivered by live performers rather than relying solely on animatronics and special effects. Tickets available on the website or by calling 973-876-2789.

short_narration	Count Orlok's Nightmare Gallery is at 217 Essex Street
long_narration	Count Orlok's Nightmare Gallery at 217 Essex Street is Salem's only horror museum, and it has consistently earned top ratings from visitors. The gallery features life-sized creatures and characters spanning over a hundred years of horror cinema, created by Hollywood special effects artists. Expect to encounter classics from Universal Monsters to modern horror icons, each rendered with movie-quality detail and artistry. The collection is ever-expanding, with new additions appearing regularly. The name references Count Orlok, the vampire from F.W. Murnau's 1922 silent film Nosferatu, one of the foundational works of horror cinema. The choice reflects the gallery's focus on horror as an art form, not just cheap scares. This is a museum for genre enthusiasts who appreciate the craftsmanship behind the creatures. A gift shop on-site offers horror-themed merchandise. The gallery is located on Essex Street's pedestrian mall, making it easy to combine with visits to Salem's witch shops, psychic parlors, and other attractions. This is one of Salem's best rainy-day options.

short_narration	Gallows Hill Museum and Theatre is at 7 Lynde Street long_narration	Gallows Hill Museum and Theatre at 7 Lynde Street combines museum exhibits with live theatrical performance to tell the story of Salem's supernatural past. The location on Lynde Street places it near several other witch trial attractions, creating a cluster of experiences that visitors can explore on foot. The name Gallows Hill evokes one of Salem's most potent and haunting images. For centuries, a hill by that name was believed to be where the accused witches were hanged in 1692. The actual execution site was confirmed in 2016 as Proctor's Ledge, a different location. But the power of the name endures. The museum component features exhibits on the witch trials and Salem's broader history of the supernatural. The theater element adds live performance, bringing an immediacy that static exhibits cannot match. The combination makes for an experience that is both educational and visceral. Check with the venue for current show times and pricing. Phone 978-825-0222.

short_narration	Witch Mansion is at 186 Essex Street on the pedestrian mall long_narration	The Witch Mansion Haunted House at 186 Essex Street occupies prime real estate on Salem's pedestrian mall. The haunted house delivers a walk-through scare experience in the middle of one of the most heavily trafficked tourist corridors in the city. Essex Street's pedestrian mall stretches from the Witch House on the west end to the Peabody Essex Museum area on the east, and on busy days, especially October weekends, the street is packed with visitors. The Witch Mansion capitalizes on this foot traffic with an accessible, visible haunted attraction that draws in passersby. Salem's haunted attraction scene ranges from genuinely terrifying experiences designed for adults to family-friendly walk-throughs suitable for younger visitors. The Witch Mansion sits in this spectrum, offering an entertaining haunted house experience in a convenient central location. No need to trek to the edges of town. The scares come to you right on the main street.

short_narration	The Andrew Safford House is a grand Federal-era mansion near Essex Street long_narration	The Andrew Safford House is a Federal-era mansion that exemplifies the wealth and refined taste of Salem's merchant class during the city's maritime golden age. The house reflects the prosperity that international trade brought to Salem in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. Merchants like Safford built grand homes that rivaled anything in Boston or Philadelphia, filling them with imported furnishings, Asian porcelain, and custom woodwork by local craftsmen like Samuel McIntire. The house is located near the Peabody Essex Museum campus, which owns and maintains several of Salem's most significant historic houses. The area around Essex Street and the museum contains one of the finest collections of Federal-era domestic architecture in the United States. Walking this neighborhood, you can see how Salem's extraordinary wealth from trade translated into extraordinary architecture. The Safford House is part of this remarkable collection, standing as evidence of a time when Salem was one of the richest cities in America.

short_narration	Benjamin Punchard, Shoreman. Historic Salem landmark. Historic landmark from Salem's past long_narration	The Benjamin Punchard memorial commemorates one of Salem's shoremen, the laborers who worked the wharves and waterfronts loading and unloading the merchant ships that made Salem wealthy. While the merchants, captains, and judges of Salem history are well documented, the workers who did the physical labor of international trade are often overlooked. Shoremen carried barrels of pepper, chests of tea, and crates of exotic goods on and off ships in all weather. The work was hard, poorly paid, and essential. Without men like Benjamin Punchard, Salem's merchant princes could not have built their fortunes. This memorial offers a reminder that Salem's maritime glory was built on the labor of ordinary people. The grand mansions on Chestnut Street and the elegant Custom House tell one part of the story. Memorials like this one tell the other part. The part about calloused hands, aching backs, and long days on the wharf.

short_narration	The Bewitched statue is ahead on Essex Street long_narration	The Bewitched Sculpture on Essex Street is a six-foot-tall bronze statue of Elizabeth Montgomery as Samantha Stephens from the 1960s TV sitcom Bewitched. The series filmed several episodes in Salem for its seventh season in 1970 after a fire shut down its Hollywood set. In 2005, the nostalgia cable channel TV Land gifted this statue to Salem in honor of the show's fortieth anniversary. It has quickly become one of the most photographed landmarks in the city. Visitors line up to take selfies, mimic the iconic nose twitch, and pretend to cast spells alongside Samantha. The statue represents an interesting layer of Salem's identity. Beyond the real history of 1692, beyond the genuine spiritual community, there is Salem's pop culture connection to witchcraft. Bewitched, along with Hocus Pocus and other films, has helped make Salem a destination for visitors whose interest in witchcraft is playful rather than historical or spiritual. The statue sits near the intersection of Essex Street and Washington Street, impossible to miss on any walk through downtown Salem. Photo credit to Ben Rekemeyer.

short_narration	Central Wharf extends into Salem Harbor from Derby Street

long_narration	Central Wharf is one of several wharves that once lined Salem Harbor during the city's golden age of maritime trade. In the late eighteenth century, Salem had more than fifty wharves extending into the harbor, each serving the merchant ships that traded with ports across the globe. Central Wharf sits near Derby Street, surrounded by the other maritime structures preserved within the Salem Maritime National Historical Park. The wharf area offers waterfront views and a sense of the physical scale of Salem's maritime operations. At its peak, Salem was one of the richest cities in America, rivaling Boston and Philadelphia in international trade. Ships from Salem were the first American vessels to reach many ports in the East Indies and the Pacific. The city's motto, To the Farthest Ports of the Rich East, captures the ambition and reach of this small New England port. Walking the wharf area today, with the harbor stretching out before you, it is easy to imagine the bustle of ships, cargo, and commerce that once defined this waterfront.

short_narration	Charlotte Forten Park is Salem's newest green space on Derby Street long_narration	Charlotte Forten Park on Derby Street honors one of Salem's most remarkable residents. Charlotte Forten was an educator, writer, poet, abolitionist, and women's rights activist who came to Salem from Philadelphia seeking the equal education she could not find at home. She became the first African American to graduate from the Salem Normal School, now Salem State University, with the class of 1856. Forten later became the first northern African American teacher to go south to teach formerly enslaved people. Throughout her life, she faced inequality due to her race and gender, but used her pen to advocate for justice and equality. The park, roughly twenty-five thousand square feet, includes a plaza for programs and performances, a harbor walk around the South River, swing seating facing the water, built-in percussion features, and green space. It connects downtown Salem to the Point neighborhood and the historic waterfront. Charlotte Forten Park tells an essential story about Salem that goes beyond witch trials and maritime trade. It is a story about courage, education, and the ongoing struggle for equality.

Charlotte Forten was an educator, writer, poet, abolitionist, and women's rights activist. Forten was originally from Philadelphia where she was brought up in a prominent abolitionist family and her desire for an equal education led her to Salem, Massachusetts, where she was the first African-American to graduate from the Salem Normal School, now Salem State University, with the class of 1856. Throughout her life, Forten faced inequality due to her race and gender; however, that did not deter her. She used her pen to express her frustrations and advocate for solutions. Her life's work as a poet and translator showcased her as a leading social justice activist. Forten, who was an advocate for equality for women and people of color, education for all, and for the end of slavery, was also the first northern African-American teacher to go south to teach former slaves.

short_narration	You are entering the Charter Street Historic District long_narration	The Charter Street Historic District encompasses one of the oldest and most historically significant neighborhoods in Salem. The area centers on Charter Street, which runs from the waterfront up toward Essex Street, passing the Charter Street Cemetery and the Witch Trials Memorial along the way. The cemetery, established in 1637, is the oldest burying ground in Salem and one of the oldest in the United States. Buried here are witch trial judge John Hathorne, Governor Simon Bradstreet, Mayflower passenger Captain Richard More, and many other figures from Salem's earliest centuries. The district's buildings span several centuries of architectural styles, from First Period colonial houses to Federal-era mansions. Walking through this area gives you a condensed timeline of Salem's development from a small Puritan settlement into a prosperous merchant city. The district is listed on the National Register of Historic Places and is one of the most photographed neighborhoods in Salem, especially during October when the ancient gravestones and weathered buildings take on an especially atmospheric quality.

The Crowninshield family was one of Salem's most prominent merchant dynasties, deeply involved in the international trade that made the city wealthy. Elizabeth Crowninshield married Elias Hasket Derby, America's first millionaire, connecting two of Salem's most powerful families. Reverend William Bentley, the house's other namesake, was the minister of Salem's East Church and one of the most learned men in early America. His diary, kept from 1784 to 1819, is one of the most important primary sources for understanding daily life in Federal-era Salem. Bentley recorded everything from shipping news to political gossip to weather observations. The house is maintained by the Peabody Essex Museum and represents the architectural style and domestic life of Salem's colonial period. short_narration	The Gardner-Pingree House is one of Samuel McIntire's masterworks long_narration	The Gardner-Pingree House is widely regarded as one of the finest examples of Federal architecture in the United States. Designed by Samuel McIntire and built in 1804 for the merchant John Gardner, the house showcases McIntire's extraordinary skill as both architect and decorative carver. The proportions are elegant, the details exquisite. McIntire's signature carved ornaments, including garlands, urns, and sheaves of wheat, adorn the facade and interior. The house also carries a darker story. In 1830, Captain Joseph White, a retired merchant who lived here, was murdered in his bed. The case became a national sensation and was prosecuted by Daniel Webster. Nathaniel Hawthorne may have drawn on the crime for aspects of The House of the Seven Gables. The house is now owned by the Peabody Essex Museum and is open for tours. It stands on Essex Street near the museum campus, a jewel of American architecture in a city full of architectural treasures.

long_narration	The Hathaway House is a colonial-era dwelling located near the House of the Seven Gables campus on the Derby Street waterfront. The house contributes to the remarkable concentration of historic architecture in this area, where buildings from the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries stand within walking distance of each other. Salem's waterfront district has been continuously occupied since the city's founding in 1626, making it one of the oldest areas of continuous European settlement in North America. The Hathaway name connects to several prominent Salem families. The Derby Street area, running from Pickering Wharf to the House of the Seven Gables, offers one of the best walking tours of historic architecture in New England. The mix of domestic, commercial, and maritime buildings tells the story of a community that lived, worked, and traded on this waterfront for four centuries.

short_narration	Look for the Ladies of Salem on the lampposts along Essex Street long_narration	The Lady of Salem Maritime Public Art Celebration features over seventeen painted figureheads created by local artists, displayed on lampposts along the Essex Street pedestrian mall from June through October. The project began in 2012, sponsored by the Salem Beautification Committee. Each figurehead is a thirty-three inch fiber-molded form painted and embellished by a local artist, embodying various aspects of Salem's Golden Age of Sail. Figureheads were ornamental carvings that graced the bowsprit of sailing ships and helped identify the vessel. During the late seventeen nineties, Salem was the richest city in America with over fifty wharves. Spices, textiles, and other riches were brought to Salem from Asia and the Caribbean. Locally crafted products were traded around the world. Salem's city motto, To the Farthest Ports of the Rich East, celebrates this period. The Ladies pay homage to this maritime glory. Each figurehead is paired with a school, civic organization, or business sponsor, making this a true public-private collaboration. Keep your eyes on the lampposts as you walk Essex Street.

short_narration	The Nathaniel Bowditch House is at 9 North Street long_narration	The Nathaniel Bowditch House at 9 North Street was the home of one of Salem's most remarkable residents. Nathaniel Bowditch was a self-taught mathematician who went to sea as a young man and discovered over eight thousand errors in the standard English navigation manual, John Hamilton Moore's Practical Navigator. In 1802, Bowditch published his own work, The New American Practical Navigator, which remains the world standard for celestial navigation to this day. The book is still published and used by the United States government. Bowditch's achievement is extraordinary. A man with almost no formal education, born in a small New England port, produced a work of mathematical and navigational science that surpassed everything that had come before. He later became president of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and made important contributions to astronomy and mathematics. Salem has produced many remarkable figures, but Bowditch stands out as a genius whose work saved countless lives at sea and advanced human understanding of navigation.

short_narration	This statue of Roger Conant, the founder of Salem in 1626, is one of the most photographed landmarks in the city long_narration	The Roger Conant Statue depicts the founder of Salem, who led a small group of settlers to establish the community in 1626, two years before the arrival of the larger Massachusetts Bay Colony. The statue, erected in 1913, shows Conant in his Puritan cloak and hat, standing at the edge of Salem Common near Washington Square. It has become one of Salem's most recognizable and most photographed landmarks. There is a delightful irony to this statue. Visitors who do not know Salem's history frequently mistake Conant's Puritan cloak for a witch's outfit, posing with the statue under the assumption that it depicts a witch or wizard. Roger Conant would have been appalled. As a Puritan leader, he would have viewed witchcraft as a mortal sin. Yet here he stands, permanently misidentified as a symbol of the very thing his community feared and persecuted. The statue is free and accessible at all hours, located at the corner of Brown Street and Washington Square. It is a perfect photo opportunity and a good starting point for exploring Salem Common.
narration_pass_2	Roger Conant founded Salem in 1626, sixty-six years before the witch trials. He led the first permanent European settlement on this peninsula, originally called Naumkeag by the Indigenous people. The Puritans renamed it Salem, from the Hebrew word for peace. Conant was a practical man, a fisherman and farmer, not a religious zealot. He negotiated the merger of his settlement with the arriving Puritan colonists led by John Endicott in 1628. By 1692, Salem had grown from Conant's small fishing settlement into one of the wealthiest ports in the colonies, built on the maritime trade that the Custom House and Derby Wharf still represent.
narration_pass_3	Salem's founding story is one of pragmatic survival, not religious mission. Conant's settlers came for fish and trade. The Puritans came for God. The tension between commerce and piety ran through Salem's entire history and erupted in 1692. The accusers came largely from the agrarian Salem Village, the Putnam faction. The accused often came from the merchant class, the Porter faction. Land disputes, inheritance fights, and economic resentment fueled the accusations as much as any belief in witchcraft. As Cotton Mather wrote from Boston, defending the trials even as doubts grew: The Devil is a sower of discord. He was right about the discord. Less certain about the Devil.

short_narration	Salem Common is a nine-acre park in the heart of downtown long_narration	Salem Common is a nine-acre public park in the heart of downtown Salem. Used as common grazing land since the sixteen thirties, it is one of the oldest public spaces in the United States. The Common is surrounded by grand architecture, including the Salem Witch Museum in its Gothic Revival former church, the Hawthorne Hotel, and several magnificent Federal-era mansions. The park features walking paths, mature trees, a bandstand, and the Roger Conant statue at its southern edge. Throughout the year, Salem Common hosts events, festivals, and community gatherings. In October, during Haunted Happenings, the Common becomes a central gathering point for the city's massive Halloween celebration. The Washington Arch at the north end commemorates George Washington's visit to Salem in 1789. The First Muster monument marks the spot where the first militia in America mustered in 1637. Salem Common is more than a park. It is a palimpsest of nearly four hundred years of American history, written in stone, bronze, and living trees.
narration_pass_2	Salem Common has been public land since 1714, but the area around it was central to colonial Salem. Washington Square, on the south side, was the civic heart. The meetinghouse where examinations took place stood nearby. In 1692, this was where the community gathered, where news spread, where fear was amplified by proximity. Salem was a town of perhaps two thousand people. Everyone knew everyone. When the afflicted girls pointed at a neighbor and screamed, the whole community watched. The examinations were public theater. Magistrate Hathorne would ask: Who afflicts these children? The accused would deny. The girls would convulse. The crowd would gasp.
narration_pass_3	The social dynamics of 1692 played out in spaces like this. Ingersoll's Ordinary, the tavern in Salem Village, was where news transformed into rumor. The atmosphere: roaring hearth, overlapping voices, the hiss of a red-hot poker in flip, tobacco smoke thickening. On examination days, the tavern packed beyond capacity. Magistrates at the best table. Afflicted girls visible. The accused brought through the crowd. Conversations stopped. Every eye watched. As one witness recalled the minister's influence: Parris preached that devils sit at the Lord's Table. After that sermon, the tavern conversations changed. Suspicion replaced trust.
description	Right in the heart of downtown Salem, this grassy green 8-acre public park has been a common area since the 17th Century. Great for picnics, walks, and photos.

long_narration	Salem Harbor was one of the major international ports in the American colonies and the early republic. Spanning both north and south of Salem, the harbor served as the gateway for Salem's extraordinary international trade. During the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, merchant ships from Salem sailed to ports across the globe, importing ceramics, furniture, decorative arts, spices, dyes, textiles, and other exotic goods. Salem's captains were among the first Americans to trade with China, Japan, India, and the East Indies. At its peak, the city had over fifty wharves extending into the harbor. Today, the harbor is best enjoyed from Pickering Wharf, where restaurants and shops line the waterfront, or from the end of Derby Wharf, where panoramic views stretch across the water to Marblehead and beyond. The harbor is known for its beautiful sunsets. If your timing is right, find a spot on the waterfront as the sun drops behind the city. It is one of Salem's most memorable views.

long_narration	Salem Maritime National Historical Park was the first National Historic Site designated in the United States, established by Congress in 1938. The park preserves and interprets the maritime history of New England and the nation. During the late eighteenth century, Salem was one of the richest cities in America, its wealth built on international trade. Ships from Salem sailed to the East Indies, China, Africa, and beyond. The park includes twelve historic structures, a replica tall ship called the Friendship, and approximately ten acres of land along the waterfront. Key sites include the Custom House where Hawthorne worked, Derby Wharf, the Scale House, the West India Goods Store, the Derby House, and the Narbonne House. Rangers offer free tours and programs throughout the season. The park is free to enter, though some special programs may have fees. Visitor center hours are nine to five daily. Start your visit at the main visitor center on Derby Street for orientation, maps, and program schedules. Phone 978-740-1650.
narration_pass_2	Salem Maritime was the first National Historic Site designated in the United States, established in 1938. Derby Wharf stretches over two thousand feet into Salem Harbor. In the 1790s, this wharf handled cargo from around the world. Salem vessels carried codfish, lumber, and rum outbound, and returned with pepper, sugar, tea, silk, and porcelain. At its peak, Salem was the sixth-largest city in America and one of the wealthiest per capita. The decline came fast: the Embargo Act of 1807, the War of 1812, and the rise of deeper-water ports in Boston and New York ended Salem's dominance within a generation.
narration_pass_3	Walk Derby Wharf and imagine the scene in 1800. Ships with names like Grand Turk, Astrea, and Friendship tied up here after voyages of a year or more. Crews of twenty or thirty men, many from Salem families, sailed routes that the East India Marine Society mapped and shared. The Friendship, whose replica sits nearby, made fifteen voyages between 1797 and 1812. Captain Nathaniel Silsbee sailed her to Sumatra, India, and China. The cargo manifests read like a world market: pepper, coffee, sugar, indigo, silk, tea, and tin. Each voyage was a gamble. Storms, pirates, disease, and hostile ports took ships and men. The profit, when it came, built the mansions on Chestnut Street.

short_narration	The First Muster monument stands on Salem Common long_narration	The First Muster monument on Salem Common marks a significant moment in American military history. On this spot in 1637, the first militia in America was mustered, organized, and drilled. This makes Salem the birthplace of the American citizen-soldier tradition and, by extension, the National Guard. The militia was established just seven years after Salem's founding as a permanent settlement. The need for organized defense was urgent. Relations with some Native American groups were tense, and the Pequot War was underway in Connecticut. The concept of the citizen militia, ordinary people taking up arms in defense of their community, became a foundational principle of American democracy. It was enshrined in the Second Amendment and shaped the nation's approach to military service for centuries. The monument stands at the north end of Salem Common, near the Washington Arch. Together, these monuments connect Salem to some of the most important themes in American history, well beyond the witch trials that dominate the city's popular image.

short_narration	The Washington Arch stands at the north end of Salem Common long_narration	The Washington Arch at the north end of Salem Common commemorates President George Washington's visit to Salem on October 29, 1789. Washington visited Salem as part of his tour of New England following his inauguration as the first President of the United States. The visit was a significant event for Salem, which had played an important role in the American Revolution. Salem's privateers had captured more British ships than any other American port during the war. Washington's tour was designed to build national unity and demonstrate the new federal government's connection to communities across the young nation. The arch stands near the First Muster monument, together forming a pair of landmarks that connect Salem to pivotal moments in American history. Most visitors come to Salem for the witch trials story, but the city's contributions to the Revolution, to early American commerce, and to the development of democratic institutions are equally remarkable.

Salem, like communities across America, sent its sons and daughters to serve in every theater of the war. The memorial serves as a place of reflection and remembrance. Salem Common's role as a gathering place for the community stretches back nearly four hundred years. It has hosted celebrations, protests, musters, and memorials. The World War II Memorial adds to this layered history, reminding visitors that Salem's story extends far beyond the witch trials. short_narration	Yin Yu Tang is a two-hundred-year-old Chinese house that was transported and reassembled inside the Peabody Essex Museum long_narration	Yin Yu Tang is one of the most extraordinary exhibits at the Peabody Essex Museum. It is a complete, two-hundred-year-old Chinese house from the Huizhou region of Anhui Province, transported piece by piece across the Pacific Ocean and reassembled inside the museum. The house belonged to the Huang family for eight generations. When the last residents moved away, the museum negotiated its acquisition and painstaking disassembly. Every beam, tile, and carved panel was cataloged, shipped to Salem, and rebuilt to its original specifications. Walking through Yin Yu Tang, you move through rooms that span two centuries of Chinese domestic life. Family altars, sleeping quarters, a central courtyard. The house tells the story of how one family lived through dynastic change, revolution, and modernization. Its presence in Salem connects to the city's centuries-old trading relationship with China. Salem's merchants were among the first Americans to trade with Chinese ports. The Canton trade brought porcelain, tea, silk, and other goods to Salem. Yin Yu Tang continues that cultural exchange in a profound and tangible way. Admission to PEM required.

description	The Hawthorne Hotel has been a landmark in Salem since opening its doors in 1925. This beautifully restored Federal-style historic hotel is named for celebrated author Nathaniel Hawthorne, who grew up in Salem, served as Surveyor of the Port at the Salem Custom House, and wrote The Scarlet Letter while living nearby. Ideally located in the heart of downtown Salem, the hotel overlooks historic Salem Common and is directly across from the Salem Witch Museum. Guests are just steps from the Peabody Essex Museum, The House of the Seven Gables, Pickering Wharf, and Front Street's shops and restaurants—making the Hawthorne Hotel an ideal home base for exploring Salem and the North Shore of Massachusetts. The hotel's 89 guest rooms blend historic character with modern comfort. Many rooms feature views of Salem Common or the surrounding historic district, while updated furnishings, refined gold accents, and comfortable amenities provide a welcoming stay. The Hawthorne is a popular choice for wedding guest accommodations, corporate travelers, and weekend getaways in Salem, MA. In 2025, the Hawthorne celebrated its 100th anniversary and was named Best Historic Hotel by Historic Hotels of America. A proud member of Historic Hotels of America and New England Inns & Resorts, the hotel is also a certified Age-Friendly Salem business. Amenities include complimentary on-site parking, full accessibility, and a welcoming atmosphere for all visitors. Meetings & Corporate Events in Downtown Salem Planning a meeting or corporate event in Salem? The Hawthorne Hotel offers over 9,000 square feet of flexible meeting and event space, including the Grand Ballroom and multiple breakout rooms. Ideal for off-site meetings, corporate retreats, trade shows, retirement celebrations, and holiday parties, the hotel combines professional amenities with historic New England character. With 89 guest rooms, a central downtown location, and discounted meeting packages, the Hawthorne provides more than just meeting space—it delivers a full-service corporate event experience. Suggested corporate itineraries and curated amenities make planning easy for businesses hosting events in Salem, MA. Special Events & Weddings in Salem, MA Located in the heart of downtown Salem overlooking the historic Salem Common, the Hawthorne Hotel is a premier Salem MA wedding venue and special event destination. The hotel features timeless event spaces, including the elegant Grand Ballroom with dramatic Palladian windows facing the Common, along with multiple smaller function rooms ideal for rehearsal dinners, bridal showers, engagement parties, and intimate celebrations. The Hawthorne accommodates weddings and celebrations from 10 to 200 guests and offers a variety of inclusive wedding packages designed for a seamless planning experience. Couples work directly with an experienced on-site events team who assist with ceremony coordination, reception details, rehearsal dinners, farewell breakfasts, overnight room blocks, and trusted local vendor referrals. With historic charm, walkable access to Salem's attractions, and comprehensive planning support, the Hawthorne Hotel offers a complete destination wedding experience in Salem, Massachusetts.

short_narration	The Custom House is where Nathaniel Hawthorne worked as surveyor from 1846 to 1849 long_narration	The Custom House stands as one of the most significant buildings within the Salem Maritime National Historical Park. Built in 1819, this Federal-era building served as the center of Salem's international trade operations, where customs inspectors weighed, measured, and taxed goods arriving from around the world. Its most famous occupant was Nathaniel Hawthorne, who worked here as surveyor from 1846 to 1849. In the introduction to The Scarlet Letter, Hawthorne wrote that he discovered an old scarlet cloth letter A in the attic of this very building, along with documents telling the story of Hester Prynne. Whether the discovery was real or literary invention, it provided the spark for one of the greatest American novels. Today the building contains exhibits on the tools and work of the Custom Service, as well as Hawthorne's office, preserved much as it would have looked during his tenure. Free admission as part of the Salem Maritime National Historical Park. Rangers are available to answer questions.
narration_pass_2	The Custom House is where Nathaniel Hawthorne worked as surveyor of the port from 1846 to 1849. It was here, he claimed, that he discovered the manuscript that became The Scarlet Letter. But the building's history goes deeper. Salem's Custom House represents the maritime wealth that built this city. In the late 1700s and early 1800s, Salem ships traded with China, India, Sumatra, and Africa. The East India Marine Society, founded by Salem captains in 1799, became the Peabody Essex Museum. Salem was once one of the richest cities per capita in America, all built on the sea trade processed through this customs office.
narration_pass_3	Hawthorne's connection to Salem was personal and painful. His ancestor Judge John Hathorne was the most aggressive magistrate during the witch trials. Nathaniel added the W to his surname. In the Custom House essay that opens The Scarlet Letter, he wrote about finding old documents in the upstairs chambers. Whether that discovery was real or literary invention, the building gave him the frame for his greatest work. He was fired from the Custom House when the political party changed, and used his sudden free time to write the novel that made him immortal.
description	Exhibits on the tools of the Custom Service, the work of the Customs inspectors, and the office of Nathaniel Hawthorne, whose three-year-long stint in the Salem Custom House inspired his classic novel, The Scarlet Letter.

short_narration	The Derby House on Derby Street was built in 1762 as a wedding present long_narration	The Derby House was built in 1762 as a wedding present for Elias Hasket Derby and Elizabeth Crowninshield Derby. They lived here for the first twenty years of their marriage. Elias Hasket Derby would go on to become one of the most important figures in American maritime history and is often cited as America's first millionaire. His fortune was built on international trade. Derby's ships sailed to the East Indies, China, and ports around the world, bringing back spices, silk, porcelain, and other exotic goods that made Salem one of the richest cities in the young republic. The house itself is a Georgian-style residence that reflects the prosperity and taste of Salem's merchant elite. It is part of the Salem Maritime National Historical Park and offers visitors a window into the domestic life of Salem's golden age of trade. The building stands on Derby Street, which was named for the family. Free admission with National Park Service ranger-led tours available seasonally.

long_narration	The Essex Institute Museum Building sits on the campus of the Peabody Essex Museum. The Essex Institute was founded in 1848 and served as Essex County's historical society, collecting documents, artifacts, and architectural records related to the region's history. In 1992, the Essex Institute merged with the Peabody Museum of Salem to form the Peabody Essex Museum, creating one of the oldest and most comprehensive museums in the United States. The Institute's collections, including extensive archives related to the Salem witch trials, became part of PEM's holdings. The building itself is an architectural landmark, reflecting the nineteenth-century commitment to preserving local history. The area around the museum campus, centered on Essex Street, has been the cultural heart of Salem for centuries. The original Essex Institute courthouse records include some of the primary documents from the 1692 witch trials, making this institution's collections invaluable to historians and researchers studying that period.

short_narration	The Halloween Museum is at 131 Essex Street

long_narration	The Halloween Museum at 131 Essex Street celebrates the holiday that has become synonymous with Salem. If any city in America deserves a Halloween museum, it is this one. Salem's October transformation is legendary. Over a million visitors descend on the city each October, making it the de facto Halloween capital of the United States. The museum explores the history and evolution of Halloween, from its ancient Celtic origins as Samhain, when the veil between the living and the dead was believed to thin, through its transformation into the costume-and-candy holiday we know today. Salem's own relationship with Halloween is relatively recent. The city began embracing its witch trial heritage as a tourist attraction in the 1970s and 1980s. By the 1990s, the annual Haunted Happenings festival had grown into a month-long celebration that now draws visitors from around the world. The museum sits on Essex Street's pedestrian mall, surrounded by the witch shops and attractions that make Salem's October experience unique.

short_narration	The Hawkes House on Derby Street was designed by Samuel McIntire, one of America's earliest and most influential architects long_narration	The Hawkes House on Derby Street was designed by Samuel McIntire, the self-taught woodcarver who became one of the most important architects of the Federal period in American history. The house was commissioned by Elias Hasket Derby, America's first millionaire, but Derby died before it was completed. The house eventually passed to other owners and takes its name from a later family. McIntire's work defines much of Salem's most beautiful architecture. His signature style combined elegant Federal proportions with exquisite carved ornament, creating buildings that remain among the finest in New England. The Hawkes House is part of the Salem Maritime National Historical Park, offering visitors a chance to see McIntire's work in context alongside the wharves, warehouses, and other structures that tell the story of Salem's maritime golden age. The building illustrates how Salem's extraordinary wealth from international trade translated into extraordinary architecture.

short_narration	The Narbonne House dates to around 1675, making it one of the oldest houses in Salem

long_narration	The Narbonne House, built around 1675, is one of the oldest surviving houses in Salem and a rare example of a modest colonial dwelling. Unlike the grand merchant homes that dominate Salem's historic landscape, this house tells the story of working-class life in colonial New England. It was built for butcher Thomas Ives and later named after Sarah Narbonne, whose grandfather Jonathan Andrews purchased the house in 1780. Sarah was born here and lived here her entire life. Multiple generations of families lived here over more than three centuries, each leaving architectural layers that archaeologists and historians have carefully documented. The house sits within the Salem Maritime National Historical Park and provides a fascinating contrast to the nearby Custom House and grand wharf buildings. Its survival is remarkable. While wealthy merchants built and rebuilt in fashionable styles, this humble First Period house endured virtually unchanged. Free to view the exterior. Interior tours available seasonally through the National Park Service.

short_narration	The Pedrick Store House sits at the foot of Derby Wharf long_narration	The Pedrick Store House at 1 Derby Wharf was originally built in Marblehead in 1770 by Thomas Pedrick, a patriot who commissioned privateers to capture British merchant vessels during the American Revolution. Captured cargo was likely stored in this very building. The store house was later moved to its current location at the foot of Derby Wharf, where it became part of the Salem Maritime National Historical Park. Privateering was a legal and highly profitable form of warfare in the eighteenth century. Private ship owners received letters of marque from the government authorizing them to seize enemy vessels. Salem was a major center of privateering during both the Revolution and the War of 1812. Over 150 privateers sailed from Salem during the Revolution alone. The Pedrick Store House is a tangible connection to this era, when the line between merchant, patriot, and privateer was blurred by the necessities of war.

short_narration	The Public Stores building on Derby Street was used by U long_narration	The Public Stores building on Derby Street served as the U.S. Customs Service warehouse, holding cargo from merchant ships until the importers could pay the duties owed to the government. Goods arrived in Salem in barrels, crates, bags, and chests from ports across the globe. Pepper from Sumatra, tea from China, silk from India, sugar from the Caribbean. Each shipment was inspected, weighed, and taxed before being released to the merchant. The customs duties collected at ports like Salem were the primary source of revenue for the young American government. In the early decades after independence, customs revenue funded nearly the entire federal budget. Salem's importance to this system is why it was chosen as the site of the first National Historic Site in the United States. The Public Stores building is part of the Salem Maritime National Historical Park. It stands near the Custom House, the Scale House, and Derby Wharf, forming a cluster of buildings that together tell the story of Salem as a center of global trade.

short_narration	The Scale House on Derby Street stored the scales and weighing equipment used to measure cargo from incoming ships long_narration	The Scale House on Derby Street served a precise and essential function in Salem's maritime trade. It stored the scales and weighing equipment that customs inspectors used to measure cargo from incoming ships. The scales were never used inside the building itself. Instead, they were carted to the wharf and assembled alongside each vessel as it unloaded. This was careful, methodical work. Every barrel of pepper, chest of tea, and bolt of silk had to be accurately weighed so the correct duty could be assessed. The revenue depended on precision. The Scale House is part of the Salem Maritime National Historical Park, joining the Custom House, Public Stores, and Derby Wharf in telling the story of how international trade actually worked in early America. These buildings show the infrastructure behind the romance of tall ships and exotic ports. Someone had to weigh the pepper. Someone had to calculate the tax. These mundane but essential tasks happened right here.

short_narration	St. Joseph Hall. Joseph Society, a fraternal society, built this headquarters in 1909 long_narration	St. Joseph Hall at 160 Derby Street was built in 1909 by the St. Joseph Society, a Polish fraternal organization. By the early twentieth century, the western end of Derby Street had become the heart of Salem's Polish community. Like many American port cities, Salem received waves of immigrants who transformed its neighborhoods and culture. The Polish community joined earlier waves of Irish, French Canadian, and other immigrant groups who came to Salem for work in its factories and mills after the maritime trade declined. St. Joseph Hall served as a community center, meeting place, and social hub for Polish families. Fraternal societies like the St. Joseph Society provided mutual aid, cultural preservation, and social connection for immigrant communities navigating life in a new country. The building is part of the Salem Maritime National Historical Park, recognized for its role in telling the broader story of Salem beyond the witch trials and maritime trade. Salem's immigrant history is an essential and often overlooked chapter of the city's story.

short_narration	The West India Goods Store on Derby Street was a retail shop selling exotic goods from around the world long_narration	The West India Goods Store on Derby Street represents the retail end of Salem's international trade empire. The term West India Goods Store was used in Salem as a generic name for shops selling imported products from around the world, not just the Caribbean. Captain Henry Prince built this structure in the early 1800s. A store like this would have sold spices, coffee, tea, sugar, rum, molasses, fabric, and other exotic goods brought to Salem by merchant ships. For Salem residents in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, a visit to the West India Goods Store was a connection to the wider world. The scents of cinnamon, pepper, and cloves filled the air. Bolts of silk from China sat alongside sugar from Barbados. The store is part of the Salem Maritime National Historical Park. It offers a vivid reminder of the era when Salem's merchants traded with ports across the globe, making this small New England city one of the richest in America. The building helps bring the abstract concept of international trade down to a human, sensory scale.

description	Essex Heritage Essex National Heritage Commission (Essex Heritage) is a non-profit organization that has been federally authorized to manage and oversee the unique heritage resources of the Essex National Heritage Area. Mission: To preserve and enhance the historic, cultural, and natural resources of the Essex National Heritage Area located in Essex County, Massachusetts. Vision: The historic, cultural and natural resources (and their associated history, organizations, and people) are recognized as critically important to maintaining the quality of life, community vitality, and economic sustainability of Essex County, Massachusetts. Essex National Heritage Area The Essex National Heritage Area was created as an act of Congress in 1996 and encompasses the 34 cities and towns of Essex County, Massachusetts. Within this NHA there are two National Parks (Salem Maritime National Historic Site and Saugus Ironworks National Historic Site) and the US Parker River National Wildlife Refuge. There are also several state parks, thousands of acres of conservation land, and numerous museums, historic houses and heritage sites that are open to the public and owned/managed by non-profit organizations and municipal governments. Land Acknowledgement: The Essex National Heritage Area encompasses land on which Native communities have thrived for millennia. The Pawtucket band of the Massachuset Tribe inhabited the land that is now known as Essex County. As advocates for the appropriate interpretation and stewardship of our many natural, historic, and cultural resources, Essex Heritage has a responsibility to acknowledge all stories, past and present.

type	psychic
short_narration	Angelique Renard reads at Hex on Essex Street
long_narration	Angelique Renard is a Salem Witch, High Priestess of the Salem Coven, and a gifted psychic medium who has been offering spiritual guidance since childhood. She reads at Hex: Old World Witchery at 184 Essex Street, one of Salem's most well-known occult shops. Angelique specializes in tarot, palmistry, and spirit mediumship, offering seekers insight into their past, present, and future. The tradition of psychic reading in Salem connects to a broader history. In 1692, the ability to perceive things beyond normal sight was viewed with suspicion and fear. The afflicted girls who accused their neighbors of witchcraft claimed to see spectral visions. Today, that same gift of perception is offered as a service, celebrated rather than condemned. Readings with Angelique can be booked through Hex at 978-666-0765 or through the website. Walk-ins may be available depending on the day and season. October is the busiest month. Plan ahead.

short_narration	Celestial Navigation Astrology & Wellness. A quiet healing space for astrology, reiki, sound baths, tarot, workshops, private tours and more long_narration	Celestial Navigation Astrology and Wellness at 254 Essex Street offers a quieter, more contemplative spiritual experience than many of Salem's walk-in psychic parlors. The space blends intuitive insight with energy work, offering astrology readings, reiki healing, sound baths, tarot consultations, workshops, and private tours. The emphasis here is on clarity and renewal. Sessions are by appointment, which means less waiting and a more personalized experience. You can book online through their website. The name Celestial Navigation connects beautifully to Salem's maritime heritage. For centuries, Salem's sea captains navigated by the stars, using celestial observation to guide their ships across oceans. Nathaniel Bowditch, Salem's most famous navigator, wrote The American Practical Navigator in 1802, which remains the global standard. Celestial Navigation the shop carries this tradition forward, using the positions of celestial bodies to guide personal journeys rather than ocean voyages.

short_narration	Fatima's Psychic Studio is nearby on Essex Street long_narration	Fatima's Psychic Studio is one of many reading rooms clustered along Essex Street in downtown Salem. Psychic readings are deeply woven into Salem's modern identity. While the witch trials of 1692 were driven by fear of the supernatural, today Salem embraces the mystical. Dozens of psychics, mediums, and tarot readers operate in the city, offering everything from quick card readings to deep mediumship sessions. The concentration of psychic practitioners in Salem is remarkable. Within a few blocks of Essex Street, you can find tarot, palmistry, astrology, crystal ball gazing, aura photography, past life regression, and spirit communication. For visitors, a psychic reading is one of Salem's quintessential experiences. Whether you approach it as entertainment, spiritual practice, or genuine seeking, the experience is uniquely Salem. Walk-in readings are often available, but during busy periods, especially October weekends, advance booking is recommended.

long_narration	Live Spellcasting: Within the Witching Hour offers one of Salem's most interactive spiritual experiences. At 282 Derby Street, inside a black box theater, a practicing witch leads you through a live ritual where you cast your own spell. The experience is designed to be immersive and participatory. You are not a passive observer. You become part of the ceremony. The show is appropriate for all ages, making it a good option for families visiting Salem who want a magical experience without the scares of the haunted attractions. Open during the summer season and October. The spellcasting experience is part of the Witch Village complex on Derby Street, which offers multiple witch-themed attractions and shops in one location. Whether you believe in the power of spellwork or simply enjoy the theater of it, the Witching Hour provides a memorable and unique Salem experience. Advance tickets are recommended during busy periods.

long_narration	Omen: Psychic Parlor and Witchcraft Emporium occupies space at 184 Essex Street, part of the Hex family of businesses that form one of Salem's most significant clusters of magical practice. The parlor offers psychic readings, tarot consultations, and mediumship sessions in an atmospheric setting designed to enhance the experience. The name Omen suggests messages from the universe, signs that reveal hidden truths. In Puritan Salem, omens were taken very seriously. Unusual events, strange animal behavior, or unsettling dreams could all be interpreted as evidence of witchcraft or divine displeasure. Today, the practitioners at Omen channel that same sensitivity to signs and symbols in a positive direction, helping clients find clarity, healing, and connection. short_narration	Personal Rainbow Aura Photography is at HausWitch on Washington Street long_narration	Personal Rainbow Aura Photography is offered at HausWitch Home and Healing at 144 Washington Street. The custom-built aura photo booth captures the colors of your personal energy field using specialized sensors and cameras. Each session includes a fifteen- minute interpretation of your aura colors and a keepsake Fuji Instax Wide film photo. The booth accommodates two people or just one. Aura photography has roots in the concept of the human energy field, a belief shared by many spiritual traditions that the body radiates an electromagnetic field that can reveal information about emotional, physical, and spiritual states. Different colors are associated with different qualities. Blue might indicate calm and communication. Red suggests passion and energy. Purple points to spiritual awareness. For visitors looking for a unique Salem souvenir beyond the standard T-shirt and magnet, an aura photo is hard to beat. It is personal, memorable, and makes for a great conversation starter when you get home.

short_narration	The Psychic Spa is at 184 Essex Street long_narration	The Psychic Spa at 184 Essex Street takes the concept of psychic reading beyond traditional divination into the realm of transformation. Here, psychic practitioners guide you through sessions involving breath work, energy healing, and trance states designed to restore balance, recall past lives, commune with ancestors, or raise shields of power. The approach is more experiential than a standard tarot reading. You recline, release, and receive, allowing the practitioner to work with your energy in a therapeutic way. The Psychic Spa is part of the Hex family of businesses at 184 Essex Street. The spa concept reflects a broader trend in Salem's spiritual community toward integrating traditional psychic arts with modern wellness practices. The result is something that appeals to visitors who might be interested in meditation, yoga, or energy work but have never considered visiting a psychic. Advance booking is recommended. She has trained with world-famous master-level regression therapy trainers from the United Kingdom, Portugal, Brazil, and the United States. Her approach integrates humor with a profound understanding of metaphysics, psi phenomena, and holistic health. Past life regression involves guided relaxation and focused attention to access memories that practitioners believe come from previous incarnations. The therapeutic aim is healing and understanding, not entertainment. Sessions are by appointment. Contact pastliferegressionsalem at gmail. There is something fitting about past life work in Salem. A city haunted by its own past, where the echoes of 1692 still reverberate in every street and every story. Here, exploring the past is not just an academic exercise. It is a living practice.

short_narration	Salem Seance is at Hex on Essex Street
long_narration	Salem Seance offers an authentic seance experience in the Spirit Parlor of Hex at 184 Essex Street. Gifted psychic mediums guide the session, connecting with loved ones who have crossed over and with spirits who inhabit Salem's layered history. The seance tradition has deep roots in American culture. The spiritualist movement of the mid-nineteenth century made spirit communication mainstream, and seances became fashionable parlor entertainment across New England. Salem, with its history of spectral evidence and spirit testimony, is perhaps the most fitting city in America for this practice. The practitioners at Hex have helped thousands of people reunite with souls on the other side. Whether you approach the experience as a believer, a skeptic, or simply curious, the seance offers a unique and memorable encounter with Salem's spiritual traditions. Sessions are held regularly. Advance booking through Hex at 978-666-0763 is recommended, especially during October. Group sizes are limited to maintain the intimate atmosphere.

The concept of the sea witch connects two of Salem's defining identities. The maritime port city that grew rich from ocean trade, and the spiritual community that embraces magical practice. Salem's sailors once feared sea witches who could summon storms and curse voyages. Today, The Sea Wych reclaims that archetype as a source of empowerment and connection to the natural world. The shop's location in Derby Square puts it at the crossroads of Salem's historic waterfront and its downtown shopping district. It is a unique find even by Salem's standards. Phone 508-319-1885.

It is a popular choice for wedding parties, bachelorette groups, and friends' nights out looking for something uniquely Salem. Beyond readings, Tarot Cove hosts live ritual theater, creating immersive experiences that blend spiritual practice with dramatic performance. The tarot itself has a rich history dating back to the fifteenth century. Originally a card game in Renaissance Italy, the tarot evolved into a tool of divination and self-reflection over the following centuries. Today, tarot reading is one of the most popular and accessible forms of spiritual practice. In Salem, tarot readers are everywhere. short_narration	Look for the Cat Witch mural nearby on Harbor Street long_narration	The Cat Witch mural is located near 64 and a half Harbor Street, part of Salem's Punto Urban Art Museum. This open-air gallery in the Point neighborhood features dozens of murals by local and international artists, transforming the residential streets south of downtown into an extraordinary outdoor museum. The Cat Witch mural blends two of Salem's most recognizable symbols. The witch, of course, from the city's 1692 history and modern magical community. And the cat, Salem's unofficial mascot, beloved by locals and visitors alike. The Punto Urban Art Museum was created to bring art into the everyday lives of the Point neighborhood's residents, many of whom are from immigrant communities. The murals celebrate diversity, cultural heritage, and community pride. The project can be explored on foot, and the Punto website provides a map of all the murals with artist information. The Point neighborhood is just south of Derby Street, within easy walking distance of Salem's main tourist areas.

short_narration	Communion with Us. Public art installation. Public art worth a look long_narration	Communion with Us is a mural in Salem's Punto Urban Art Museum, the open-air gallery that has transformed the Point neighborhood south of downtown into an outdoor museum of contemporary art. The mural explores themes of community, connection, and shared experience. The Punto Urban Art Museum was launched to bring world-class art into the everyday environment of a working-class neighborhood. The Point, historically home to waves of immigrants who came to Salem for work in its factories and fishing industry, is a community rich in cultural diversity. The murals reflect this diversity, telling stories of heritage, identity, and belonging. For visitors, exploring the Punto murals offers a completely different side of Salem from the witch shops and museums of Essex Street. Here, art speaks to contemporary life, immigrant experience, and the power of creativity to transform public space. The murals can be found on buildings, walls, and fences throughout the neighborhood. Check puntourbanartmuseum.org for a complete map.

short_narration	Crabs. Public art installation. Public art worth a look long_narration	The Crabs sculpture is one of several public artworks scattered through Salem's downtown and waterfront neighborhoods. The piece adds maritime whimsy to the streetscape, reminding passersby of Salem's deep connection to the ocean. Salem has been a fishing and trading port since its founding in 1626. The harbor, wharves, and waterfront define the city's geography and history. Public art like Crabs brings this maritime identity into the present, making it visible and playful in the urban landscape. Salem's public art scene has grown significantly in recent years, with installations ranging from the large-scale Punto Urban Art Museum murals in the Point neighborhood to smaller sculptures and installations throughout downtown. The city actively supports public art through beautification initiatives, artist partnerships, and community projects. Keep your eyes open as you walk through Salem. Art appears in unexpected places.

short_narration	Equality. Public art installation. Public art worth a look long_narration	The Equality artwork is a public art installation that speaks to themes of justice, equal rights, and human dignity. In Salem, these themes carry particular weight. The witch trials of 1692 stand as one of America's most powerful cautionary tales about what happens when fear overrides justice and due process is abandoned. Twenty innocent people were executed. Over two hundred were accused. The trials destroyed families and traumatized a community. Today, Salem uses its dark history as a platform for advocacy. The city has officially apologized to the victims of the witch trials and has embraced its role as a symbol of the importance of civil liberties and equal protection under the law. Public art like Equality continues this tradition, using creative expression to keep these values visible in the daily life of the city. The piece is located in the area south of downtown, near other public artworks in the Point neighborhood.

short_narration	The Garden Boy mural is nearby on Peabody Street

long_narration	Garden Boy is a mural in Salem's Punto Urban Art Museum, located on Peabody Street in the Point neighborhood. The mural is part of the extraordinary collection of outdoor art that has transformed this residential area into one of the most vibrant open-air galleries in New England. The Punto Urban Art Museum features works by both local and international artists, painted directly on the buildings and walls of the neighborhood. Garden Boy adds color, life, and imagination to the streetscape. The Point neighborhood, bounded roughly by Derby Street, Congress Street, and Lafayette Street, has a distinct character. It is more residential and diverse than the tourist-heavy areas to the north. Walking through the Punto murals gives visitors a glimpse of everyday Salem, the Salem where people live, work, and raise families alongside the city's famous history. long_narration	The Goldfish artwork is one of several public art installations in Salem's downtown area. The piece brings color and whimsy to the streetscape, offering a moment of delight for pedestrians. Salem's investment in public art reflects the city's broader identity as a creative community. Beyond the witch shops and historic sites, Salem supports a vibrant arts scene that includes galleries, studios, theaters, and public installations. The Peabody Essex Museum anchors the city's cultural life with world-class exhibitions, while independent artists and galleries along Essex Street and in the Point neighborhood add depth and diversity. Public artworks like Goldfish are part of this ecosystem, making art accessible and present in everyday spaces. You do not need to buy a museum ticket to encounter art in Salem. It meets you on the street, on the walls of buildings, and in the parks and public spaces of this creative city.

short_narration	Life is Sweet is a public artwork nearby

long_narration	Life is Sweet is a public art piece located in the Point neighborhood area of Salem, south of the downtown tourist district. The artwork brings a message of positivity and celebration to the streetscape. Salem's public art ranges from the deeply historical and political to the purely joyful. Life is Sweet falls in the latter category, offering passersby a moment of simple pleasure. The Point neighborhood has been particularly enriched by public art in recent years, thanks largely to the Punto Urban Art Museum project. The area's transformation through art has brought national attention and visitor interest to a neighborhood that was previously overlooked by most tourists. For visitors who have spent their morning exploring witch museums and haunted attractions, a walk through the Point's public art offers a refreshing change of pace. Different themes, different stories, different colors. Still Salem, but a side most visitors never see.

short_narration	The Love Child mural is on Peabody Street

long_narration	Love Child is a mural at 24 Peabody Street, part of Salem's Punto Urban Art Museum. The piece celebrates themes of love, identity, and community, rendered in the vibrant style that characterizes the Punto collection. The mural is one of dozens scattered through the Point neighborhood, creating an open-air gallery that can be explored on foot. The artists represented in the Punto collection come from diverse backgrounds and traditions, reflecting the multicultural character of the neighborhood itself. The Point has historically been home to immigrant communities, from Polish and French Canadian families in the early twentieth century to Dominican and other Latin American families today. The murals honor this heritage while creating new cultural landmarks for the community. Walking the Punto murals is one of Salem's hidden gems. Most tourists stick to Essex Street and Derby Street, but the Point offers art, authenticity, and a different perspective on what makes Salem special.

short_narration	Migrar. Public art installation. Public art worth a look long_narration	Migrar, Spanish for to migrate, is a public artwork in Salem's Point neighborhood. The piece speaks directly to the immigrant experience that has defined this community for over a century. Salem's Point neighborhood has been home to successive waves of immigrants, each bringing their own culture, language, and traditions to this small New England city. Polish families came in the early twentieth century to work in the leather factories. French Canadians came for the textile mills. More recently, Dominican and other Latin American families have made the Point their home. Migrar honors this ongoing story of movement, adaptation, and community-building. The artwork is part of the broader Punto Urban Art Museum collection, which uses public art to celebrate and make visible the cultural richness of this diverse neighborhood. For visitors to Salem, the Point offers a powerful reminder that the city's story is not only about 1692. It is also about the ongoing American story of immigration, diversity, and the courage to start over in a new place.

short_narration	The Our Lady of Guadalupe artwork is nearby long_narration	The Our Lady of Guadalupe artwork in Salem's Point neighborhood reflects the deep Catholic faith and Latin American cultural heritage of many families in this community. Our Lady of Guadalupe is one of the most powerful religious and cultural symbols in the Americas, revered by millions as a patron and protector. In the Point neighborhood, where many residents trace their roots to the Dominican Republic and other Latin American countries, this image carries profound spiritual and cultural significance. The artwork is part of the collection of public art that fills the Point's streets, some connected to the Punto Urban Art Museum, others created independently by community members. Together, they create a visual tapestry of the neighborhood's identity. Salem's religious history is complex. Founded by Puritans who persecuted those who practiced differently, the city has evolved into a place where many faiths and spiritual traditions coexist. Our Lady of Guadalupe adds another layer to this ongoing story of religious diversity in a city once defined by religious fear.

long_narration	Pride slash Identity is a public artwork that celebrates self- expression, personal truth, and the courage to be who you are. In Salem, these themes carry particular weight. In 1692, people were accused, imprisoned, and executed for being perceived as different. Those who did not conform to Puritan expectations of behavior, dress, or belief became targets of suspicion and violence. Today, Salem has become a city that celebrates difference. The LGBTQ plus community, the pagan and witchcraft community, the immigrant community, and the artist community all find welcome in a city that learned the hardest possible lesson about the dangers of intolerance. Public art like Pride slash Identity makes this commitment to inclusion visible in the physical fabric of the city. It is a statement that Salem's streets belong to everyone. The artwork is located in the Point neighborhood area, surrounded by other pieces that explore themes of identity, heritage, and belonging.

long_narration	Super Dali is a mural at 6 Peabody Street, part of Salem's Punto Urban Art Museum. The piece draws inspiration from the surrealist tradition, specifically referencing Salvador Dali, one of the twentieth century's most recognizable artists. The mural brings a touch of surrealist whimsy to the residential streetscape of the Point neighborhood. The Punto Urban Art Museum has attracted national attention for its ambitious scope and the quality of its artists. The project transforms ordinary building walls into canvases for extraordinary art, creating a museum without walls or admission fees. Super Dali is one of the collection's more playful entries, bridging high art and street art in a way that is accessible and fun for all viewers. The mural can be found at puntourbanartmuseum.org, which provides a map and information about all the works in the collection. Walking the Punto murals takes about thirty to forty-five minutes at a leisurely pace.

short_narration	Untitled. Public art installation. Public art worth a look long_narration	This untitled public artwork is part of Salem's growing collection of street art, murals, and installations that bring creative expression to the city's public spaces. Untitled works invite viewers to bring their own interpretation. Without a title to guide the eye, you are free to see what speaks to you. Salem's public art scene has expanded significantly in recent years, with major projects like the Punto Urban Art Museum in the Point neighborhood, the Lady of Salem figureheads on Essex Street, and independent installations throughout downtown. The city actively supports public art through beautification committees, artist partnerships, and community initiatives. For a city famous for its dark history, Salem's contemporary art scene is remarkably vibrant and diverse. The art does not shy away from Salem's past, but it also does not let the past define the city's creative future. This piece adds to that ongoing conversation between history and imagination.

long_narration	Verduras, which means vegetables in Spanish, is a public artwork that celebrates the food culture and daily life of Salem's Latin American community. Food is one of the most powerful expressions of cultural identity, and in the Point neighborhood, the flavors, colors, and ingredients of Caribbean and Latin American cuisine are part of the community's character. The artwork transforms a simple everyday subject into something worth looking at and thinking about. What we eat, where it comes from, and how we prepare it all tell stories about who we are and where we come from. The Point neighborhood's culinary culture is one of its great assets. Visitors who venture beyond the tourist restaurants on Derby Street and Essex Street will find authentic Dominican, Puerto Rican, and other Latin American food in this neighborhood. Verduras is a reminder that some of Salem's best experiences are found off the beaten path.

long_narration	Villa Alegra, which translates roughly to Happy Village or Joyful Home, is a mural in Salem's Punto Urban Art Museum collection. The piece can be found at puntourbanartmuseum.org with full details about the artist and concept. The name captures the spirit that the Punto project brings to the Point neighborhood. Despite the challenges that come with being a working-class immigrant community, there is genuine joy and pride in the Point. The murals express this through color, imagery, and story. Villa Alegra contributes to the neighborhood's transformation through art, adding beauty and meaning to everyday spaces. The Punto Urban Art Museum has been recognized as one of the most successful public art initiatives in New England, drawing visitors to a neighborhood that most Salem tourists never see. It proves that art does not need to be behind glass or beyond a ticket counter to be powerful. Sometimes the best gallery is the street itself.

Window Phone [narration] id: window_phone

id	window_phone
name	Window Phone
lat	42.5183255

type	public_art
short_narration	Window Phone. Public art installation. Public art worth a look long_narration	Window Phone is a public artwork in Salem's Point neighborhood that plays with the boundary between the interior and exterior of buildings. The piece adds an element of surprise and whimsy to the streetscape, inviting passersby to look more closely at the built environment around them. Public art that transforms everyday objects and architectural features into art is particularly effective in neighborhoods where people live and work. It makes the familiar strange, encouraging residents and visitors to see their surroundings with fresh eyes. The Point neighborhood's public art collection, anchored by the Punto Urban Art Museum, has made this transformation visible and permanent. Every street, every building facade, becomes a potential canvas. Window Phone is one of the more playful entries in this collection, proving that public art does not always need to be serious or political. Sometimes it just needs to make you smile and look at the world a little differently.

Weddings at Ledger Restaurant & Bar There are so many benefits to having your wedding at a restaurant like Ledger. The restaurant provides everything you need in house (chairs, napkins, plates, water decanters etc – no rentals are required! Ledger has an in house sound system and uses Spotify if you can’t afford to hire a DJ. Candles, lanterns, and vintage décor add to the unique space. Bringing your own floral arrangements to add your own personal touch. They have amazing craft cocktails that are always available and a huge inventory of bar selections instead of just your basic titos/soda. And of course, they have delicious food! Ledger offers stationary displays, passed appetizers, full sit down meals PLUS they make cakes, donuts & sweet treats all in house too!

short_narration	AliJen Charters operates out of 10 White Street near Salem Harbor long_narration	AliJen Charters offers fishing trips out of Salem Harbor, captained by Dan Grimes, who holds a U.S. Coast Guard 100-Ton license. Captain Dan grew up on the water, working alongside his father on commercial fishing boats since he was six years old. Since 2014, he has focused on rod and reel fishing, specializing in cod, haddock, stripers, and tuna off the coast of Massachusetts. Salem's connection to the ocean goes back to its founding. The city was built on fishing and maritime trade, and the fishing tradition continues today. A trip with AliJen Charters connects you to this living heritage. You will sail out of the same harbor that once launched merchant ships to the East Indies and privateers against the British fleet. The charters accommodate anglers of all levels, from experienced fishermen to complete beginners. Departures from 10 White Street. Call 781-910-3776 for reservations and pricing. As Captain Dan says, it is not about the catch. It is about the adventure.

long_narration	Bewitched Historical Tours offers fun and informative walking tours led by local historians, departing from the Halloween Museum at 131 Essex Street. The tours cover what really happened in 1692, visiting twelve or more historic sites connected to the witch trials. Advance purchase is recommended through BewitchedTours.com, though tickets may be available at the Halloween Museum if space remains. The tour focuses on the real history rather than the Hollywood version. You will learn about the specific people involved, the social and political tensions that fueled the accusations, and the devastating aftermath. Salem's witch trial history is more complex and more human than the popular image suggests. It was not about pointy hats and broomsticks. It was about fear, jealousy, property disputes, and a justice system that failed catastrophically. Bewitched Historical Tours brings this nuanced story to life on the actual streets where it happened. Phone 978-498-4061.

long_narration	Black Cat Tours offers both daytime historical tours and ghostly night tours, operating from the Black Cat Curiosity Shoppe at 234 Essex Street. The company has been voted one of the ten best ghost tours in the United States four years in a row. The daytime tours focus on Salem's captivating true tales, covering the witch trials, maritime history, and literary heritage. The evening tours shift into darker territory, exploring Salem's ghost stories and haunted locations. The dual format lets visitors choose their experience based on their interests and their tolerance for spookiness. The Black Cat is a fitting mascot for a Salem tour company. Cats have been associated with witchcraft in European folklore for centuries, and Salem has embraced the black cat as an unofficial city symbol. Tickets are available at the shoppe on Essex Street or online at blackcatsalem.com. Walk-in availability varies by season. October is the busiest month, and advance booking is essential. long_narration	Lighthouse and Harbor Tours offer boat-based explorations of Salem's islands and coastline, departing from 10 Blaney Street near the Salem Ferry Terminal. From June through September, trips to Baker's Island Light, Misery Island, and specialty tours are available. Overnight stays and camping at Baker's Island Light are also offered for a truly unique experience. Baker's Island Lighthouse has guided ships into Salem Harbor since the early nineteenth century. The island itself is a private community accessible only by boat. Misery Island, managed by the Trustees of Reservations, offers hiking trails and stunning coastal views. Seeing Salem from the water provides a completely different perspective on the city. The harbor, the wharves, the lighthouse at the end of Derby Wharf, and the coastline stretching toward Marblehead all come into view. These boat tours connect you to the maritime heritage that defined Salem for centuries. Phone 978-224-2036 for schedules and booking. Check the website for current offerings.

long_narration	Salem Historical Tours is Salem's oldest, most respected, and most recommended tour company, celebrating over twenty-five years of operation from 8 Central Street. Their certified local guides lead history tours covering witchcraft, maritime history, and revolutionary history during the mornings and afternoons, and ghost and paranormal tours in the afternoons and evenings. The history tour explores four centuries of Salem, from its founding through maritime glory, revolution, industry, and pop culture. The 1692 Witchcraft Walk examines the demographics, theories, and personal stories behind the witch trial hysteria. The ghost tours take visitors into Salem's darker corners after nightfall. What sets Salem Historical Tours apart is the depth of knowledge their guides bring. These are not actors reading scripts. They are certified historians who can answer detailed questions and provide context that goes far beyond the standard tourist narrative. Look for their purple sign at 8 Central Street. Phone 978-745-0666. Website salemhistoricaltours.com.

long_narration	Salem Kids Tours is Salem's only walking tour designed specifically for children and families, operating from 316 Essex Street. All tour guides are certified Massachusetts educators who know how to engage young minds with history, mystery, and a little magic. The tour is designed for ages five and up, with content that is age-appropriate while still being genuinely interesting. The tours feature interactive storytelling that keeps children engaged, true historical tales that fascinate all ages, and a kid's-eye view of Salem's captivating past. Parents consistently call it the best thing we did in Salem. Finding age-appropriate activities in Salem can be challenging. Many of the ghost tours and haunted attractions are designed for adults and can be too frightening for young children. Salem Kids Tours fills this gap, offering an experience that is educational, entertaining, and safe for the whole family. Visit salemkidstours.com to book or email Alicia at alicia at salemkidstours.com. Phone 978-766-1103.

short_narration	Salem Night Tour departs nightly at eight from 127 Essex Street long_narration	The Salem Night Tour is Salem's nightly haunt and history tour, departing at eight every evening from 127 Essex Street. Licensed guides lead you through the darkened streets of Salem, weaving together legends, history, and the infamous hysteria of 1692. The night tour format adds an atmospheric dimension that daytime tours cannot match. Salem's colonial buildings, gas-lit streets, and ancient cemeteries take on a different character after dark. Shadows deepen. The temperature drops. And the stories hit differently when you are standing in the dark next to a three- hundred-year-old graveyard. The tour covers Salem's major historical events and haunted locations, with guides who balance genuine historical knowledge with entertaining storytelling. This is not a scream-and-jump haunted house experience. It is a walking tour that uses the night to enhance the natural atmosphere of one of America's most historically rich cities. Purchase tickets online at salemghosttours.com. Phone 978-741-1170.

short_narration	The Salem Trolley departs from 8 Central Street long_narration	The Salem Trolley is Salem's original trolley tour, offering a one-hour narrated ride through nearly four hundred years of the city's diverse history. The distinctive red replica turn-of-the- century trolleys depart from 8 Central Street and cover major historical sites, neighborhoods, and landmarks that would take hours to explore on foot. For visitors with limited time or mobility, the trolley provides an efficient and comfortable overview of Salem. The trolley also offers Tales and Tombstones night tours during July, August, and October. As dusk transforms the city, the tour explores Salem's darker side, visiting scenes of murders and executions, hearing tales of ghosts, haunted hotels, underground passageways, and haunted islands. Beyond tours, Salem Trolley provides event transportation aboard their replica trolleys. Weddings, corporate events, and private parties can be transported in style and comfort. Phone 978-744-5469 or visit salemtrolley.com for schedules, tickets, and event booking. The Salem Trolley has served the city for over a quarter century.

short_narration	Salem Uncovered Tours meets at 1 Houdini Way long_narration	Salem Uncovered Tours offers premier walking tours led by expert storytellers, meeting at 1 Houdini Way. The company runs afternoon tours focused on the tragic history of the witch trials and evening tours exploring Salem's broader dark history. The name Salem Uncovered suggests peeling back the layers of myth and popular culture to reveal the real stories beneath. Salem's history has been dramatized, fictionalized, and commercialized so extensively that the truth can get lost. Tours like Salem Uncovered work to restore historical accuracy while maintaining the compelling narrative that makes these stories worth telling. The meeting point at Houdini Way connects to another layer of Salem's rich cultural history. Harry Houdini, the famous escape artist, had connections to the world of spiritualism and the supernatural that resonate with Salem's identity. Book tours directly through salemuncovered.com. Phone 978-791-2131. Advance booking recommended, especially for October visits.

short_narration	The Schooner Fame sails from Pickering Wharf at 86 Wharf Street long_narration	The Schooner Fame is the top-rated boat tour in Salem. This beautiful replica of the 1812 privateer Fame sails three to four times daily from Pickering Wharf at 86 Wharf Street, right downtown among the shops and restaurants. The original Fame was a Baltimore clipper-style privateer that captured or destroyed over twenty British vessels during the War of 1812. The replica offers a hands-on sailing experience. You can help raise the sails, listen to the roar of the deck cannon, and learn about Salem's epic maritime history from knowledgeable crew members. The trip provides stunning views of Salem's waterfront, harbor, and coastline that you simply cannot get from shore. Beer, wine, drinks, and snacks are available on board. The sunset trips are particularly popular and should be booked well in advance. The experience is family-friendly for children at least five years old. You have not really seen Salem until you have seen it from the water. Phone 978-729-7600 or visit schoonerfame.com for schedules and tickets.

short_narration	Spellbound Tours meets at the Armory Park bell long_narration	Spellbound Tours is Salem's original supernatural tour experience, top-rated on TripAdvisor and led by professional paranormal investigators. Tours meet at the Armory Park bell and venture into Salem's most haunted and historically charged locations. The guides are not just storytellers. They are active paranormal investigators who bring equipment and experience to every tour. Spellbound covers a broader range of supernatural topics than most Salem tours. Yes, you will learn about the witch trials. But you will also explore New England vampire folklore, voodoo traditions, and other supernatural phenomena that have roots in this region. The approach is frightening and historically accurate, a combination that distinguishes Spellbound from tours that prioritize entertainment over substance. Located at 213 Essex Street, the tours are accessible from the heart of Salem's downtown. Advance ticket purchase through spellboundtours.com is recommended. Phone 978-740-1876. October dates sell out quickly.

long_narration	Sunset Sail Salem offers a truly premium sailing experience aboard a stunning 1930 schooner yacht, departing from 10 Blaney Street. The experience combines luxury, romance, and breathtaking coastal views in what the company calls Salem's truly authentic North Shore sailing experience. A cash bar with craft cocktails is available on board. The schooner sails all day, every day during the season, with sunset trips being the most popular and romantic option. Sailing out of Salem Harbor on a vintage schooner connects you to centuries of maritime tradition. Salem's harbor has launched everything from fishing boats and merchant ships to privateers and tall ships. The coastline, the islands, and the open water have been the backdrop for Salem's story since 1626. For a special occasion, a date night, or simply a break from walking tours and witch museums, a sunset sail offers a completely different Salem experience. short_narration	Tipples and Mash Tours starts at 185 Essex Street long_narration	Tipples and Mash Tours offers Salem's only walking tour dedicated to breweries, cideries, and distilleries. Starting from 185 Essex Street, the tour combines Salem's brewing past with samples from the establishments making new history every day. Salem has a long and largely forgotten brewing tradition. In the colonial period, cider and small beer were everyday beverages. Taverns like the Ship Tavern and the Blue Anchor were social centers where news traveled, deals were made, and, in 1692, witch trial rumors spread. Today, Salem's craft beverage scene has revived this tradition with modern artisanship. Local breweries, cideries, and distilleries produce a range of drinks that reflect both New England tradition and contemporary craft innovation. The tour is perfect for visitors who love Salem's history but want to experience it through taste rather than just storytelling. It is also a great option for groups, date nights, or anyone who appreciates craft beverages. Visit tipplesandmash.com for schedules and booking.

long_narration	The National Park Service Regional Visitor Center is the best place to begin your exploration of Salem. Located near New Liberty Street, the center serves as the official starting point for the Salem Heritage Trail, a red line painted on the sidewalk that guides visitors to Salem's major historic sites. Rangers are on hand to provide free maps, brochures, and orientation to Salem's many attractions. A short film introduces Salem's history, from its founding in 1626 through the witch trials, the maritime golden age, and the literary legacy of Nathaniel Hawthorne. The visitor center is part of the Salem Maritime National Historical Park, the first National Historic Site in the United States. From here, you can easily reach the Custom House, Derby Wharf, the Peabody Essex Museum, and all of downtown Salem's major attractions on foot. Free admission. Open nine to five daily. Phone 978-740-1650. Start here, get your bearings, and let the Heritage Trail guide you through four centuries of American history.

short_narration	Just ahead is 1692 Before and After, one of Salem's most comprehensive witch trials walking tours long_narration	1692 Before and After offers what many consider the most thorough walking tour of the Salem witch trials available today. Over two hours, guides lead you through the streets of downtown Salem, stopping at key sites connected to the accusations, trials, and executions of 1692. The tour covers the full timeline. It starts with the social and religious tensions that set the stage, moves through the initial accusations in Salem Village, and follows the hysteria as it spread across Essex County. You will hear about specific accusers and accused. Tituba, the enslaved woman whose confession ignited the panic. Rebecca Nurse, the elderly grandmother whose conviction shocked the colony. Giles Corey, pressed to death for refusing to enter a plea. What sets this tour apart is its emphasis on what came before and after the trials. The guides explore the political, economic, and religious forces that made the hysteria possible, and the long aftermath of guilt, restitution, and memory that followed. Reservations are recommended, especially during October when Salem sees over a million visitors.

short_narration	You are approaching the Salem Witch Board Museum, the world's only museum dedicated to the Ouija board long_narration	The Salem Witch Board Museum is a one-of-a-kind experience. It is the only museum in the world devoted entirely to the history and mystery of the Ouija board. The collection traces the board's origins from nineteenth-century parlor game to cultural phenomenon. You will learn how the board was patented in 1891, how it became a mainstream toy sold by Parker Brothers, and how it evolved into a symbol of the supernatural in horror films and popular imagination. The museum displays include vintage boards from different eras, boards from around the world, and boards connected to documented cases of the paranormal. Some exhibits explore the darker side of Ouija history, including stories of obsession, alleged hauntings, and even crimes attributed to messages received through the board. Whether you are a skeptic or a believer, the museum offers a fascinating look at how a simple piece of wood and cardboard has captivated and terrified people for over a century. Located on Essex Street in the heart of Salem's pedestrian mall, it fits perfectly into a day exploring the city's supernatural heritage.

short_narration	The Salem Witch Museum occupies a former church at the edge of Salem Common
long_narration	The Salem Witch Museum is one of the most visited attractions in Salem. Housed in a former mid-nineteenth century church, it uses thirteen stage sets with life-size figures to dramatize the events of the 1692 witch hysteria. The main presentation takes visitors through the accusations, the trials, and the executions, with particular focus on key figures like Tituba, Bridget Bishop, and Rebecca Nurse. A second exhibition called Witches: Evolving Perceptions traces the concept of the witch from biblical times through modern Wicca. The building itself, a Gothic Revival structure originally built in 1846, adds to the atmosphere. The museum has been operating since 1972 and has become one of Salem's most iconic landmarks, visible from across Salem Common with its distinctive pointed turrets. Open daily ten to five, with extended hours in July, August, and October. Adult admission is eighteen dollars. Children six to fourteen are thirteen fifty. Under six is free. Phone number is 978-744-1692. Their phone number actually ends in 1692. Hard to forget.
narration_pass_2	The Salem Witch Museum sits on Washington Square, but the real history happened in the streets around you. In 1692, this community was torn apart by accusations of witchcraft. It began in the parsonage of Reverend Samuel Parris when his daughter Betty and niece Abigail began having fits. Within months, over 150 people were accused. Nineteen were hanged. One man, Giles Corey, was pressed to death under heavy stones. The hysteria fed on land disputes, religious anxiety, and frontier fear. The Putnam family drove many accusations. The Porter faction resisted. By October, even the governor's wife had been named, and the court was dissolved.
narration_pass_3	In the words of the accused themselves. Rebecca Nurse, a seventy-one-year-old grandmother, told the court: The children cry out against me, but I have never harmed a living soul. She was found not guilty by the jury, but Chief Justice Stoughton sent them back to reconsider. They reversed their verdict. She was hanged July 19. Bridget Bishop, the first to die, said: I would rather die innocent than live with a lie upon my conscience. She was executed June 10, a test case. If they could hang her, they could hang anyone. And they did.
description	The Salem Witch Museum, founded in 1972, offers two historical presentations. The first tells the tragic story of the 1692 witch trials and takes place in a large auditorium with life-sized stage sets which are illuminated and dramatically narrated to immerse visitors in the world of 17th-century Salem. The second exhibit, Witches: Evolving Perceptions, examines the European witchcraft trials, the evolving image of the witch, and the larger issues of persecution and scapegoating in American history. name	Salem Witch Trials Memorial
lng	-70.8918965
address	Liberty Street, Salem, MA, 01970
type	witch_museum
short_narration	You are approaching the Salem Witch Trials Memorial
long_narration	The Salem Witch Trials Memorial stands as a solemn tribute to the twenty innocent people executed during the witch hysteria of 1692. Designed by architect James Cutler and artist Maggie Smith, it was dedicated on the tercentenary of the trials in August 1992. Nobel Laureate Elie Wiesel delivered the dedication speech. Twenty granite benches jut from the stone walls, each bearing the name, method, and date of execution of a victim. The entrance features the victims' protests of innocence, their words literally cut off mid-sentence by the stone walls. Locust trees cast dappled shadows over the space, chosen for their historical association with the gallows. This memorial serves as a permanent reminder of what happens when fear, intolerance, and injustice go unchecked. The memorial is free and open from dawn to dusk. It sits on Liberty Street, adjacent to the Charter Street Cemetery. Please treat it with respect. No flowers, candles, or pets are permitted on the memorial grounds.
narration_pass_2	This memorial honors the twenty people executed in 1692. Bridget Bishop, hanged June 10, was the first. She was sixty years old, gray-haired, and wore a scandalous red bodice that was entered as evidence against her. She had been acquitted of witchcraft once before, in 1680, but the community never forgot. Rebecca Nurse, seventy-one, a devout grandmother, was hanged July 19 despite thirty-nine neighbors signing a petition defending her character. Giles Corey, eighty-one, refused to enter a plea and was pressed to death under heavy stones over two days. His last words were: More weight. He did this deliberately, knowing that without a plea, his property could not be seized from his heirs.
narration_pass_3	The voices of the dead speak through court records. Rebecca Nurse, when asked how she could be innocent while the children suffered: I am innocent as the child unborn. What sin hath God found out in me unrepented of? Giles Corey, before his pressing: I am no witch. I know not what a witch is. Bridget Bishop, maintaining her defiance: I would rather die innocent than live with a lie upon my conscience. And Samuel Wardwell, who confessed under pressure then recanted at the gallows, choosing to die honest rather than live with a forced lie. Each stone bench in this memorial bears a name and a date. Each was someone's neighbor.
description	Striking in its simplicity, the Memorial is surrounded on three sides by a handcrafted granite wall. Inscribed in the rough stone threshold entering the Memorial are the victims’ protests of innocence. These protests are interrupted mid-sentence by the wall, symbolizing society’s indifference to oppression. Six locust trees, the last to flower and the first to lose their leaves, represent the injustice of the Salem witch trials. The Symbolism at The Salem Witch Trials Memorial At the memorial’s entrance, the clipped quotations represent the silenced voices of the accused during the Salem witch trials. Their statements of innocence are cut off mid-sentence, symbolizing how their pleas were ignored and dismissed. The unfinished words serve as a powerful reminder of the injustice they faced and the lasting impact of a society that failed to listen. Benches within the Memorial perimeter bear the names and the execution dates of each of the 20 victims, creating a quiet, contemplative environment in which to evoke the spirit and strength of those people who chose to die rather than compromise their personal truths. Visiting The Salem Witch Trials Memorial The Witch Trials Memorial is located on Liberty Street between Charter Street and Derby Street and is open from dawn till dusk. It is handicapped accessible and is appropriate for all ages. When visiting the Salem Witch Trials Memorial it’s important to treat it with honor and respect. short_narration	This is the Witch House, the only structure still standing with direct ties to the Salem witch trials of 1692
long_narration	The Witch House is the only remaining building in Salem with direct connections to the witchcraft trials of 1692. Built around 1675, it was the home of Judge Jonathan Corwin, one of the magistrates who conducted preliminary examinations of accused witches. Several of these examinations likely took place in this very house. Corwin served on the Court of Oyer and Terminer that tried and convicted the accused. The house has been restored to its seventeenth-century appearance and serves as a museum of life in the late sixteen hundreds. Period furnishings, apothecary items, and architectural details give visitors a window into Puritan daily life. The building was nearly demolished in the 1940s but was saved and moved slightly from its original location to accommodate road widening. Open daily from mid-March through November, ten to five. Last entry at four forty-five. Admission is twelve dollars for adults, ten for seniors and students, eight for children six to fourteen.
narration_pass_2	You are standing at the home of Jonathan Corwin, one of the magistrates who examined the accused. He was fifty-two in 1692, a wealthy merchant with ink-stained hands and a slight limp. He sat alongside John Hathorne at nearly every preliminary examination, right here in Salem. Some examinations were even conducted inside this house. Corwin followed English legal procedure, accepting spectral evidence as valid testimony. But he carried private doubts he never voiced. When his own mother-in-law Margaret Thatcher was accused in September, the system he upheld turned on his own family.
narration_pass_3	From the examination records conducted in this house: the magistrates would ask the accused to look upon the afflicted girls. When the accused moved, the girls screamed. When the accused looked at them, they fell into fits. Jonathan Corwin watched this pattern repeat dozens of times. As he later reflected: Every accusation costs someone their livelihood. That is a fact, whatever the ministers say. His colleague Noyes told the condemned at the gallows: Confess, that God may show you mercy. Corwin quietly observed: But confession to a lie is no mercy.

description	Salem's only building with direct ties to the witch trials, the 17th century home of Judge Jonathan Corwin. Open daily from mid-March through November. Call for winter hours. Open 10-5 (Last entry into the House is 4:45) Self-guided tours for 4 adults, 2 children is current occupancy every 20 minutes. Staff positioned throughout house to chat and answer questions.

short_narration	The Witch Dungeon Museum features a live reenactment of a 1692 witch trial, adapted from actual court transcripts long_narration	The Witch Dungeon Museum brings the Salem witch trials to life through award-winning live theater. Professional actors perform a reenactment of the 1692 examination of Sarah Good, drawn directly from surviving court transcripts. After the performance, guides lead you through a recreation of the dungeon where accused witches were held in appalling conditions. The real dungeons of 1692 were overcrowded, dark, and cold. Prisoners were chained to the walls and charged for their own food and shackles. Several accused died in custody before ever reaching trial, including Sarah Good's infant daughter, who perished in the jail. The museum is located on Lynde Street, just steps from Salem Common. Open daily ten to five, April through November, with extended hours in October. Adult admission is fourteen dollars. Children are twelve dollars. This is one of the more visceral witch trial experiences in Salem. You will hear the actual words spoken in 1692.

narration_pass_2	The original Salem jail stood on Prison Lane, now the area around St. Peter's at Federal Street. The jail was a nightmare. Twenty feet by twenty feet, two stories, built in 1684. At the height of the crisis, over one hundred and fifty accused were crammed inside. Prisoners paid for their own food and their own shackles. Five people died in custody before ever reaching trial. The smell was devastating. Human waste in open buckets. Damp stone walls black with mold. Unwashed bodies. Fear-sweat. The sound was chains clinking with every movement, coughing, Sarah Good cursing, Tituba singing Barbados melodies softly, and Rebecca Nurse praying.
narration_pass_3	Primary sources describe the jail conditions. In winter, prisoners died of exposure. The stone walls radiated damp chill year-round. There was no heating, ever. Water ran down the walls. Sarah Osborne died May 10 before trial. Ann Foster died December 3. The youngest prisoner was Dorothy Good, age four, who was chained for months and emerged psychologically shattered. Her father later sued the colony for damages. The jailer, William Dounton, charged prisoners for everything: food, blankets, even the iron that bound them. When the crisis ended, some acquitted prisoners remained locked up because they could not pay their jail fees.

short_narration	Witch History Museum. Guided tour featuring the history of the 1692 Witch Trials through life-sized scenes depicting Salem’s untold stories long_narration	The Witch History Museum offers guided tours through life-sized scenes that depict key moments of the Salem witch trials. Unlike some of Salem's more theatrical attractions, this museum aims for historical depth, focusing on the personal stories and social dynamics that drove the accusations. The scenes cover the full timeline from the initial afflictions in Salem Village through the trials and executions. Guides provide context about Puritan society, the role of religion, and the political tensions between Salem Village and Salem Town that helped fuel the crisis. The museum is located on Essex Street at number 197. Open daily ten to five, April through November, with extended hours in October. This is a good choice for visitors who want a more intimate, narrative-driven experience of the witch trials story. The guided format means you can ask questions and engage with the material at your own pace.

short_narration	Artemisia Botanicals. An apothecary filled with over 400 herbs, 100 teas, essential oils, soaps, candles and other handmade products for health, beauty, and magick long_narration	Artemisia Botanicals is one of Salem's most authentic herbal apothecaries. The shop carries over four hundred dried herbs, more than a hundred varieties of tea, essential oils, handmade soaps, candles, and other botanical products crafted for health, beauty, and magical practice. The space feels like stepping into a traditional herbalist's workshop. The air is thick with the scent of dried flowers, roots, and resins. For practitioners of modern witchcraft, Wicca, or herbal medicine, Artemisia is a working supply shop, not just a tourist attraction. Tarot and tea leaf readings are available from experienced readers on staff. There is a certain historical irony to a thriving herb shop in Salem. In 1692, knowledge of herbs and healing was used as evidence of witchcraft. Ann Pudeator, a widow and healer, was hanged in part because her medical skills were seen as suspicious. Today, that same herbal tradition is celebrated openly on the streets where the accused once walked. Located at 3 Hawthorne Boulevard.

type	witch_shop
short_narration	Black Veil Shoppe is right next to the Witch House long_narration	Black Veil Shoppe for the Grim Hearted sits in the shadow of the Witch House, Salem's most historically significant building. The shop specializes in fine art, apparel, and home decor that draws inspiration from the darker side of beauty. Think Victorian mourning aesthetics, gothic romanticism, and the natural cycles of life and death. The merchandise is curated with an artist's eye. You will find original artwork, handcrafted jewelry, clothing that ranges from subtly dark to dramatically gothic, and home goods that bring a touch of the macabre to everyday living. The shop's location at 304 Essex Street makes it an easy stop before or after visiting the Witch House next door. Salem has always attracted those drawn to the edges of conventional culture. The city's dark history, its literary connections through Hawthorne and Poe, and its vibrant modern witch community create a natural home for businesses like Black Veil that celebrate the beauty in darkness.

short_narration	Botanica of Salem is just ahead at 272 Essex Street

long_narration	The Botanica and Hermetic Arts of Salem is dedicated to preserving the sacred knowledge of ancient mystery traditions. The shop offers a wide range of occult science supplies, including altar tools, magical art, books, candles, ritual cords, crystals, herbal preparations, incense, magical jewelry, powders, potions, and statuary. The term botanica has roots in Latin American spiritual traditions, where it refers to a shop selling herbs, candles, and religious items for folk magic and healing practices. In Salem, the Botanica bridges these traditions with Western ceremonial magic, Hermeticism, and modern witchcraft. For serious practitioners, this is a resource shop with depth. The staff is knowledgeable about magical traditions and can guide visitors who are new to the craft as well as experienced practitioners looking for specific supplies. Located at 272 Essex Street, the same address where the Witch House stands nearby, a reminder that the practice of magic in Salem has come a long way from 1692.

lng	-70.8880226
address	98 Wharf Street
type	witch_shop
short_narration	Enchanted is a magical gift shop on Wharf Street

long_narration	Enchanted sits along Wharf Street near Pickering Wharf, one of Salem's most popular waterfront shopping areas. The shop offers a curated selection of mystical and magical gifts, crystals, jewelry, and Salem-themed souvenirs. Wharf Street is lined with witch shops, boutiques, and restaurants, making it a natural corridor for visitors exploring Salem's waterfront. The area around Pickering Wharf was once part of Salem's working waterfront, where ships from the East Indies and China unloaded exotic cargo that made Salem one of the richest ports in America. Pepper from Sumatra, silk from Canton, porcelain from Jingdezhen. The wharves bustled with sailors, merchants, and customs inspectors. Today the wharves have been transformed into a vibrant shopping and dining district, but the maritime character remains in the architecture and the harbor views. You can still smell the salt air and hear the seagulls as you browse. Enchanted is a pleasant stop while walking the waterfront area between Derby Street and the harbor. The shop captures that feeling of discovery that has defined Salem's waterfront for four centuries. Different cargo, same sense of wonder.

short_narration	Gallows Hill Witchery's Downtown Sanctuary is just ahead on Lynde Street long_narration	Gallows Hill Witchery's Downtown Sanctuary is located at 6 Lynde Street, near Salem Common and the cluster of witch trial attractions on Lynde Street. The shop is an extension of the Gallows Hill brand, bringing magical supplies, ritual tools, and an immersive atmosphere to downtown Salem. The name Gallows Hill references the location long believed to be the execution site of the 1692 witch trials. For centuries, a hill near this name was assumed to be where the hangings took place. In 2016, researchers confirmed that the actual execution site was Proctor's Ledge, a rocky outcropping nearby. But the name Gallows Hill remains embedded in Salem's geography and imagination. The shop's location on Lynde Street places it in good company. The Witch Dungeon Museum and other witch trial attractions are just steps away, making this a natural stop while exploring this part of Salem.

long_narration	The Cauldron Black sits at 65 Wharf Street in the Pickering Wharf area, Salem's waterfront shopping district. The shop specializes in occult goods, handcrafted magical supplies, and ritual tools. For practicing witches and pagans, this is a resource shop with depth. The inventory includes candles charged for specific intentions, herbal blends, incense, crystals, and ceremonial tools. For visitors new to magical practice, the staff can guide you through the basics. Wharf Street has become one of Salem's densest concentrations of witch shops, psychic parlors, and metaphysical boutiques. The area sits just steps from Derby Street and the waterfront, making it easy to combine a visit to The Cauldron Black with a walk along the harbor or a stop at the nearby Salem Maritime National Historical Park. The shop's name evokes the classic image of a witch's cauldron, an image that connects centuries of folklore with Salem's very real and very active modern magical community.

short_narration	The Good Witch of Salem is at 2 North Street

long_narration	The Good Witch of Salem at 2 North Street started life as a children's shop and has evolved into a magical space for adults and teens. The shop offers crystals, jewelry, and carefully chosen treasures designed to inspire self-expression and nurture what the owners call your inner child magic. The name plays on a familiar cultural reference. In Salem, where the word witch carries the weight of 1692, claiming the title of Good Witch is both playful and deliberate. It reclaims the word, stripping away the fear and persecution and replacing it with something positive and empowering. The shop sits near the intersection of North Street and Essex Street, in the heart of Salem's pedestrian shopping district. It is a short walk from the Witch House and several other witch shops, making it easy to include in a walking tour of Salem's magical retail scene. The atmosphere is warm and welcoming, designed to make visitors feel comfortable regardless of their experience with witchcraft or spiritual practice.

address	282 Derby St, Salem, MA, 01970
short_narration	The Lost Library is ahead at 282 Derby Street

long_narration	The Lost Library is a peculiar gift shop at the Witch Village on Derby Street. The experience goes beyond browsing shelves. You will walk through a witch's cottage, discover a curiosity corner filled with oddities, and encounter Salem's largest glowing pumpkin. The concept is immersive shopping. You do not just buy things here. You explore. The Lost Library is part of the larger Witch Village complex at 282 Derby Street, which includes multiple attractions and experiences. This stretch of Derby Street, between the waterfront and the Charter Street Cemetery, is one of the most heavily trafficked tourist corridors in Salem. The Witch Village has been a fixture of Salem's Halloween season for decades, offering a cluster of witch-themed experiences in one location. The Lost Library adds a gentler, more whimsical dimension to the complex. It is family-friendly and appeals to visitors who want a touch of magic without the scares. Good for souvenir shopping with a sense of adventure.

name	The Ossuary
lat	42.5202991
lng	-70.8883588
address	77 Wharf St, Salem, MA, 01970
type	witch_shop
short_narration	The Ossuary is Salem's gothic boutique on Wharf Street long_narration	The Ossuary at 77 Wharf Street is Salem's premier gothic fashion boutique. The shop specializes in one-of-a-kind evening gowns, wedding attire, cocktail outfits, and corsetry. Everything is handmade or produced in small batches, making each piece a unique work of wearable art. The name ossuary refers to a repository for bones, a fitting choice for a shop that finds beauty in the dark and dramatic. The aesthetic draws from Victorian mourning fashion, gothic romance, and the dark elegance that Salem naturally inspires. For visitors attending Salem's many evening events, ghost tours, or October festivities, The Ossuary offers clothing that makes a statement. For those planning a gothic or alternative wedding, this is a destination worth the trip to Salem on its own. The shop's Wharf Street location places it in the heart of Pickering Wharf, surrounded by restaurants, galleries, and other unique boutiques. Follow them on Instagram at salemossuary to preview their latest creations.

short_narration	The Witchery Studio Space is at 61 Wharf Street

long_narration	The Witchery Studio Space at 61 Wharf Street is a multifaceted creative space that combines retail shopping with immersive experiences. The Witchery brand encompasses several Salem businesses, including the Tarot Cove reading room and the Craft Witch DIY studio. The Studio Space itself serves as a hub for these interconnected experiences. Workshops, ritual theater, and special events bring the space to life throughout the year. The Wharf Street location places it in the center of one of Salem's most vibrant shopping districts, steps from the harbor and surrounded by other witch shops, restaurants, and galleries. The Witchery represents Salem's entrepreneurial side. The city's witch identity, born from tragedy in 1692, has been transformed into a thriving creative economy. Shops like The Witchery are run by genuine practitioners who bring authenticity, artistry, and community to what could easily be just tourist kitsch.

short_narration	Witch and Fairy Emporium is on Essex Street long_narration	The Witch and Fairy Emporium at 178 Essex Street sits on Salem's pedestrian mall, the heart of the city's shopping district. The shop offers a blend of witch-themed and fairy-themed gifts, souvenirs, and magical supplies. The combination of witches and fairies in one shop reflects the broad spectrum of magical traditions that converge in Salem. While the witch trials of 1692 give Salem its most famous association with the supernatural, the city's magical community draws from many traditions. Celtic fairy lore, modern Wicca, folk magic, and nature spirituality all find expression in Salem's shops and spiritual community. The Essex Street pedestrian mall is the main artery of downtown Salem. On busy days, especially in October, this stretch is packed with visitors. The Emporium makes a pleasant stop while walking the mall between the Peabody Essex Museum and the Witch House.

short_narration	Witch City Broom Company is at 246 Essex Street

long_narration	The Witch City Broom Company at 246 Essex Street is one of Salem's more distinctive shops. They specialize in handcrafted witch brooms and DIY broom kits, allowing you to take a piece of Salem's magic home in a uniquely personal way. Beyond the signature brooms, the shop carries handcrafted candles, stylish apparel, books, stationery, seasonal decor, and other gifts. Everything is carefully curated, with an emphasis on local and regional artisans. The witch's broom, or besom, has deep roots in European folk tradition. Besoms were used in purification rituals long before they became the stereotypical mode of witch transportation in popular culture. In modern Wiccan and pagan practice, a besom is used to cleanse sacred space before ritual. The Witch City Broom Company bridges tradition and whimsy. Whether you are a practitioner looking for a ritual tool or a visitor looking for the perfect Salem souvenir, a handcrafted witch broom is hard to beat.

name	Witch Dr.
lng	-70.8929829
address	109 Lafayette Street, Salem, MA, 01970

short_narration	Witch Dr. is at 109 Lafayette Street. This shop offers a unique blend of Salem's witchy culture with a modern twist long_narration	Witch Dr. is located at 109 Lafayette Street, slightly south of Salem's main tourist corridor on Essex and Derby Streets. The shop occupies a space on the edge of the downtown district, offering visitors a chance to explore beyond the most heavily trafficked areas. Lafayette Street has its own character, with a mix of local businesses and residential neighborhood feel that contrasts with the tourist density of Essex Street. The name Witch Dr. plays on Salem's identity as the Witch City while suggesting healing and transformation. Salem has always had this duality. The city carries the weight of the 1692 tragedy, but it has also become a place where people come seeking spiritual insight, personal transformation, and connection to traditions of healing and magic. A walk down Lafayette Street to Witch Dr. takes you through a side of Salem that most tourists miss, the residential streets where locals live alongside the city's famous history.

long_narration	Witch Way Gifts offers a selection of Salem souvenirs, witch-themed merchandise, and magical keepsakes. The shop caters to visitors looking for fun, accessible mementos of their time in Salem. Salem's gift shop scene reflects the city's unique identity. Where else can you buy a witch hat, a historically accurate book about Puritan jurisprudence, and a crystal ball all within a few blocks of each other? The sheer density of witch-themed retail in downtown Salem is remarkable. Within a quarter mile of Essex Street, there are more witch shops, occult boutiques, and magical supply stores than perhaps any other place in North America. Witch Way Gifts adds to this ecosystem with a focus on fun, approachable merchandise that works for visitors of all ages and levels of interest in the supernatural. Whether you need a last-minute gift or a quick souvenir, this is a convenient stop.
